Observer Hagen, the man who runs the weather for this district and who has his office so high up in the government building, makes the following local forecast for this vicinity: Fair and pleasant to-day; slightly warmer, fair to-morrow, with probably drizzling rain about midnight; rain and warmer Sunday.

Clear and pleasant weather prevails to-day throughout the United States south of the 45th parallel. The lowest temperature shown on the government weather map is in this vicinity, while the highest, 60 degrees, is in Florida.

A storm of considerable area is advancing from the northwest; its influence is felt as far south as Indian Territory.

Very little rain will probably accompany it until after Lake Michigan is reached. The highest temperature in Toledo yesterday was 43 degrees; the lowest this morning 34 degrees.

Forecast for western New York and Ohio—Continued cool, fair weather; slightly warmer and fair Saturday and warmer Sunday.

For Lower Michigan—Fair, warmer today; cloudiness and probably rain Saturday.

For Illinois—Warmer; southerly winds and fair weather; fair Saturday.

For Indiana—Southerly winds; fair and warmer to-day and Saturday.

CONTEST IN CORK,

Who Will Succeed Parnell in Parliament?

The Voting Opened Early and Active.

Fifteen Hundred Ballots Cast the First Hour.

Priests Join the Throng and Work for Flavin.

Police and Soldiers Near at Hand—Almost Every Irishman Has a Blackthorn Under His Coat—Noisy Scenes in the Street.

Cork, Nov. 6.—To-day is to be settled the question of the succession to the seat in the house of commons from the city of Cork made vacant by the death of Charles Stewart Parnell.

The Parnellite candidate is Mr. John E. Redmond, while Mr. Martin Flavin stands for the McCarthyite interest.

The day's work was opened with vigor, 1,500 votes being cast in the first hour. The streets are full of noisy horse-playing, but so far fairly well behaved crowds of people.

Nevertheless the accustomed blackthorn peeps out from many a coat tail, and there are not wanting evidences that many hundreds of the throngs in the street are anything but averse to an exchange of blows.

Priests, members of parliament and candidates for political honors are incessantly arriving from booth to booth, encouraging their followers and looking after the interests of their respective factions.

As the leaders rush from place to place behind gesticulating drivers and flying horses they are greeted with commingled cheers and groans.

After each stop, and before each fresh start some five or ten minutes is wasted in remonstrating with voice, fist and whip against the attempts of all the way from three to a dozen persons who wish to get up on the conveyance and ride along to the next station.

There are plentiful police guards in close proximity to the voting booths and strong reserves are held in readiness for prompt service at the station houses. In addition to these precautions, there is an ample military force in the city prepared to immediately reinforce the police should such a course become necessary.

The soldiers are strictly confined to their barracks, through the gates and from the windows of which hundreds of them watch the noisy crowds passing to and fro.

WILL GO TO COURT.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Robert Lindblom who has been a member of the board of trade for 15 years, has procured an injunction from Judge Tuley restraining the board from interfering with him in sending constant market quotations of the board by telegraph from the floor of the exchange.

New York, Nov. 6.—A prominent Brazilian house here attributes the crisis in Rio to bad finances in which Fonseca was mixed up and in which he was opposed by congress.

HE TRAVELED AS A TRAMP

Good Piece of Work by a Detective.

It Took Hard Work, but He Finally Ran Down the Leader of a Gang of Counterfeiters.

Corry, Pa., Nov. 6.—Ralph VanNaular, a young man about 25 years of e, who has been connected with the notorious Seely and McCormick gang of counterfeiters, who have been manufacturing and disposing of large lots of counterfeit money for some time in various parts of the state, was arrested by Deputy United States Marshals Barring and McManus, near Garland, Pa.

William J McManus, of the United States secret service, has been working the tramp act for some time trying to locate the gang, and his last arrest is an important one.

A few days ago McCormick was arrested in Venango county, and recently VanNaular's father was arrested. These arrests were important as it secured the leaders of a bad gang of counterfeiters that has caused the government a great deal of trouble.

McManus has spent months in tramping through the country enduring all kinds of hardships, and it is due to him that the leaders were finally captured.

VanNaular was located in a lath mill two miles from Garland where he has been working for a short time trying to conceal himself. The money was always disposed of in large lots. The officers have been getting hold of the dealers one by one which finally led to the arrest of one of the slickest gangs of counterfeiters the secret service has had to deal with for some time. McManus was the officer who a short time ago worked the tramp act and hired out to Chauncey Marble, who was convicted for counterfeiting and is now serving his time in the penitentiary. VanNaular was taken to Erie to appear before the United States commissioner there.

Sebastian Stenger in Financial Trouble.

Unable to Pay His Debts, He Leaves Wapakoneta, and a Number of Farmers Mourn His Departure.

Wapakoneta, O., Nov. 6.—(Special)—Last Saturday Sebastian Stenger, of the firm of Stenger & Frank, millers and grain dealers, went home and told his wife that he had been called to Toledo on business. He had on his milling clothes, but put on a new overcoat and left on the paper train.

He told his son Anthony that he would probably not return until Monday.

On Monday evening Anthony received a letter from him postmarked Pittsburg R. P. O., and dated Oct. 31.

The letter stated he did not intend to return, that he did not want to meet his creditors, that he would tramp from place to place and that he had $60 in money, but it gave no clue to his whereabouts.

It has been known for some time that the firm was involved and that the old man was in trouble.

The mill is one of the finest in northwestern Ohio and is valued at $50,000. A receiver will be appointed. This morning the streets where the mill is situated was crowded with anxious farmers who have stored their wheat here. The farmers have sold 20,000 bushels of wheat to the firm, and are anxious about the pay.

JOHN OF AUSTRIA.

The Wandering Nobleman Heard From.

He Sailed Away in a Handsome Ship with His Charming Bride Only to be Wrecked in South America.

New York, Nov. 6.—Archduke Johann, of Austria, who a year ago gave up his title and position at court and contracted a Morganatic marriage with Jennie Steuben, a beautiful opera singer, has been heard from.

After his marriage he hired a ship and sailed as its master. The ship was not again heard of and was given up as lost with all on board.

Jennie Steuben's brother, Camillo, who is a singer in the Casino chorus, yesterday received a letter from his mother in Vienna, in which she wrote that she had heard from her daughter.

The vessel on which the archduke and his bride sailed was wrecked off the South American coast and the pair went to Chili. He took part in the late troubles there, but it is not known on which side he fought.

WHEN GARFIELD LIVED

Free Trade, Only Under a New Term,

Was to be the Policy of the Republicans.

An Interesting Piece of Unwritten History Taken from the Stormy Times When Conkling Resigned His Seat in the Senate.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—The Chicago Tribune prints the following: A Tribune reporter met Col. A. D. Conger, the Ohio member of the republican national committee, in the city to-day, and while discussing the principle of reciprocity, Col. Conger said:

"Let me give you a little incident which occurred during President Garfield's administration that I happened to know about. There is a little bit of unwritten history in connection with it and it will do no harm to give it at this time. It shows that reciprocity was to be the great policy to be developed in President Garfield's administration, and that his great secretary of state was unmistakably its author."

Col. Conger then continued: "I happened to arrive in Washington on the early morning train the day Senator Conkling resigned his seat in the United States senate. Upon my arrival at the hotel the first person I met was Hon. Emery Storrs, the eloquent orator of Chicago, and close friend of Senator Conkling. I remarked to Mr. Storrs, 'You are an early riser.' He replied, 'Yes, I have been too much disturbed to sleep.' He then told me he had been with Senator Conkling till long after midnight; that the senator, as well known, was greatly displeased with the appointment of Mr. Robertson as collector of the port of New York, and proposed to resign his seat in the senate that day, and that dissension in our party and perhaps disaster would follow.

"We took breakfast together and discussed the possibilities of a reconciliation or the harmonizing of differences. It was agreed that I should call upon the president at once and lay the situation before him. I immediately proceeded to the white house, met President Garfield and Marshal Henry, and made known my mission.

"President Garfield requested me to have Mr. Storrs see Senator Conkling at once and assure him that he (Garfield) had no personal feeling in the matter; that he meant no disrespect to the senator in the appointment, and he stood ready to carry out any wish of the senator's that was fair and reasonable, except he could not recall the appointment of Mr. Robertson—that he would be glad to have Mr. Storrs see the senator and bring any suggestions he might have to offer concerning the appointments of his friends to other positions.

"I returned to the hotel and reported to Mr. Storrs the result of my interview with the president. Mr. Storrs seemed well pleased with the assurances given, said he would see Senator Conkling at once, and he believed he could get him to reconsider his determination to resign, and that I should return to the white house, inform the president that he would see the senator immediately, and that I should there await his arrival.

"I returned to the president and we waited for tidings from Mr. Storrs, but none came. Finally Mr. Brown, the President's private secretary, came in and handed the president a telegram. It was from the Captitol announcing that Senator Conkling had resigned his seat in the senate.

"I shall never forget the look upon President Garfield's face when he read the telegram. He handed it to me and said: 'It is up—the die is cast; Senator Conkling has resigned his seat in the senate, and the consequences, whatever they may be, must rest with him; nothing further can be done now.'

"I remarked to the president that I was very sorry at the turn matters had taken; that I was fearful that the stalwart republicans would side with Mr. Conkling, and that it might create a split in the party and defeat his renomination. Now mark his reply.

"Putting his hand upon my shoulder, President Garfield said, 'Mr. Conger, do not be alarmed. We shall develop a policy during my administration which will make the republican party more popular with the people of this country than it has ever been since the day of its birth. We parted, and I never saw poor Garfield again. His assassination came soon after.

"Now, as to the policy about which he spoke, that was to become so popular with the people. I visited Washington several months after President Arthur had taken his seat as president with his cabinet reorganized.

"I think Mr. Blaine at that time was working upon his book. I met Major McKinley and we went together to call and pay our respects to Mr. Blaine. We found him at his house and had a pleasant chat with him for half or three-quarters of an hour.

"During this conversation Mr. Blaine took up and discussed the proposed pan-American congress, which he said would have been held, and the project carried out under the Garfield administration and expressed great sorrow and disappointment at the unforeseen calamity which had prevented it.

"He then went on to demonstrate the great advantages that would accrue to this country under the proposed policy which they had hoped to inaugurate. He discussed the policy of reciprocity coupled with protection and the benefits that would accrue to the American people, especially our manufacturers, our laboring men, and the farmers; how it would provide for an additional market for American cereals, American beef and pork, and American farm machinery, etc.

"Being largely identified and connected with the business of manufacturing American agricultural machinery, a business in which at that time there was more than $200,000,000 invested, I was quick to catch on to every word that Mr. Blaine uttered during the conversation. I saw in it a policy that would put in motion the wheels of nearly every manufacturing establishment in the United States, that would give employment to the great mass of American workingmen, that would further the interests of the American farmer, and the last words that Garfield had spoken to me touching the popularity of the policy he would develop during his administration flashed across my mind. I was particular to catch on to all of this, because in politics, legislation which affects one's business always attracts the greatest attention.

"I have no doubt if Garfield had lived the same policy which Mr. Blaine has now inaugurated under President Harrison would have been fully carried out by Blaine under President Garfield. It is this wonderful, practical, and far-seeing statesmanship that has given Mr. Blaine such a strong hold in the hearts of the American people, almost irrespective of party. He is to-day a million votes stronger than his party."

QUESTION OF BOUNDARY.

Ohio is Entitled to a Large Piece of Indiana,

And That State Should Contain Part of Chicago.

Early Surveyors Played Into the Hands of Indian Traders and Located a Line that Will Cause Much Trouble in Three States.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 6.—During the last two months a survey party sent out by the national government has been at work locating the boundary line between Ohio and Indiana, which has been in dispute for some time.

The work, under Prof. Mendenhall, has been completed and the survey party has its report ready for submission.

The facts found by the surveyors are, as heretofore alleged, that the true line as declared when Ohio was organized into a state commences 12 miles west of the present boundary line at the north and runs directly south to the present line between Ohio and Indiana, thus making a strip 200 miles long and of an average width of six miles—1,200 square miles—to which the state of Ohio lays claim. The strip described includes the cities of Fort Wayne, Richmond and Union City and has a population altogether of about 200,000.

An inquiry into the causes that led to the juggling of these boundary lines disclosed that at the time Ohio was made a state there were post traders located at Richmond and Fort Wayne whose trade with the Indians was very profitable. If the line had been run correctly these posts would have been taken into the new state of Ohio and the occupation of these traders would have been gone. The post traders, it is said, bribed the survey party which located the line, and Richmond and Fort Wayne were left on the Indian's side.

The question is a very important one, and a complicated one, for should Ohio's claims on Indiana be enforced Indiana would, on the same grounds, have cause of action against Illinois.

A special from Union City says that great excitement prevails among the farmers along the boundary line between Ohio and Indiana, in consequence of a rumor that the United States geodetic surveyors have discovered a serious error in the established boundary between the two states. Last winter Gov. Campbell brought the matter of the disputed boundary before the Ohio legislature. A resolution was adopted asking that the United States coast and geodetic survey bureau run the line over.

The organic act of Ohio fixes the western boundary by a line drawn due north from the mouth of Great Miami. The Ohio officials claim that a line north would run into Indiana, taking the cities of Richmond, Butler, Union City and a strip of territory from a few inches at the Ohio river to 12 miles at the northern boundary, throwing half of Steuben county into Ohio and about one-third of Allen county. Appeals have been made by residents to Gov. Hovey, but the latter is in Mexico. It is also claimed that the boundary line between Illinois and Indiana is too far east, and that when it is corrected a large part of Chicago, including the world's fair site, will be in Indiana.

Will Be an Awful Howl.

New York, Nov. 6.—A special to the Recorder says it is expected there will be a wild howl from Chicago when she learns that Indiana may ask for and receive a slice of land 12 miles wide off the eastern portion of Illinois to justify a claim that will be made on the next Indiana legislature.

Should the claim be held valid it will include the great $25,000,000 stockyards as well as the present site of the world's fair.

The immediate basis of the claim results from an Ohio claim filed against Indiana for a 12-mile strip of land on the eastern boundary. As Indiana's western boundary line was originally fixed by measurement from the eastern boundary, and as the recent surveys seem to indicate that Ohio's claim is correct, Indiana's boundary would take in that part of Illinois in which the Windy City is situated.

GONE BACK A PEG.

The New Republic in the South in Trouble.

Fonseca Has Declared Himself Dictator

In Order to Save a Distracted Country.

Another Bloody War May Follow This Action.

Rio Grande do Sul, with Its Seven Hundred Thousand People, Will Not Recognize the Dictator and Will Put Forth Strong Armed Opposition to His Ruling.

Rio Janeiro, Nov. 6.—President Deodoro da Fonseca has been proclaimed dictator.

After the troubles in Rio Janeiro last Tuesday between riotous citizens and the soldiery, in which several of the former were killed, the chiefs of the army requested Fonseca to assume the functions of a dictator, saying that the emergency demanded it.

He appeared to object for a time, but at length gave his consent. He then issued a decree relating the causes of disagreement between him and the congress and defending his position.

Wednesday a conference of ministers was held. At its conclusion Fonseca issued another decree in which he proclaimed himself dictator.

He said that the dictatorship was to last until the political revolutions were at an end and lawmakers learned to keep in progress with republican ideas.

A dictatorship, he added, was the very best thing for the distracted country. He disclaimed any intention of prolonging it after peace had been restored.

Telegrams received from Porto Alegro, in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, declare that the authority of the dictator is not recognized there.

This state is one of the most prosperous and independent of all the states. It has a population of nearly 700,000. The republicans there say they will not tolerate a dictatorship and are demanding armer opposition to Fonseca.

It is officially announced that the president has convened the nation to elect new representatives at a date to be determined upon later.

The governors of the leading provinces have congratulated Fonseca upon his success in maintaining order.

Paris, Nov. 6.—A Rio Janeiro dispatch says it is believed the elections for members of the new chamber of representatives will occur in January.

While retaining its representative and federative features, the congress will revise the constitution.

Persons charged with being enemies of the republic will, upon conviction, be immediately ordered to leave the country.

REPUBLICANS ALARMED.

The Democratic Gains Have Frightened Them.

Something Must be Done to Get Back the Wanderers.

In the Opinion of Washington People Blaine is the Only Man Who Stands Any Chance of Being Elected in 1892.

Washington, Nov. 6.—Echoes of the election continue to be heard at all public places and in the corridors of the departments. The returns were not all one way, so that both republicans and democrats found something to rejoice over.

The air is full of talk about next year. Said an Iowa newspaper correspondent to-day: "The democrats have captured Iowa again, but all the same there is one republican leader who can carry that state by 50,000 majority. His name is J. G. Blaine. It would be the same in Nebraska, Kansas, Wisconsin and everywhere else in the west and northwest. I know how the people feel in that part of the country.

"The above is not written with any purpose to boom Mr. Blaine. No efforts in that direction are necessary. The writer simply tells what he hears on all sides among republicans of all classes and conditions. Whether it be true or not, there is a very general, not to say almost universal, feeling that Blaine is the man to lead the republicans in '92."

EZETA'S BIRTHDAY.

San Salvador, Nov. 6.—Gen. Carlos Ezeta's birthday was celebrated in this city Wednesday with great pomp and ceremony. In all the cities and towns of Salvador festivities were held in honor of the president.

E. Y. TOWNSEND DEAD.

Philadelphia, Nov. 6.—Edward Y. Townsend, president of the Cambria Iron company, and a well-known man, died yesterday.

NEW CONSULS.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The president has recognized Robert Gordon Handcock as British vice-consul at Richmond, Va., and Paul Thal, consul of Russia at Chicago.

A. Major, of New York, the now wealthy proprietor of a well-known cement making industry, obtained the recipe for it in a trade a few years ago, when both he and the other man were almost penniless. He had just pawned his valise to buy a dinner, and gave away the pawn-ticket for the formula, out of which he soon made a fortune.

THE KILLING OF BLISH.

Remarkable Events in a Family History.

A Husband Seeks Revenge for a Destroyed Home.

A Faithless Wife Who Caused the Death of the Man She Loved at the Hands of a Crazed Husband.

New York, Nov. 6.—Deprived of wife, children and fortune, Henry T. Betts, who shot to death Landlord Charles F. Blish, of the Eagle hotel, Peekskill, Tuesday night, when he was taken to the Westchester county jail in White Plains yesterday, made no ado over the fact that liberty was gone too.

Murderers have been as cool before, but they have been anxious about their fate. This man was unconcerned. The same coolness which marked him when he blazed away with fatal effect at his victim's back and then turning said, "I killed him; he stole my fortune and my wife; where is a policeman?" marked him when Constable Herscher led him out of the little town lockup.

Henry B. Betts, the murderer, belongs to one of the best known families in Brooklyn. The money which he charged his wife with squandering on Blish he inherited from his father, C. C. Betts, who had a fine residence in that portion of Brooklyn once known as Bedford. The mansion still stands at the corner of Fulton and Nostrand avenues. C. C. Betts was one of the founders of the Brooklyn City railroad and was president and treasurer of the company. He made much money also in the increase in value of his real estate.

Always "queer" and at times positively "loony" since he had a sunstroke 18 years ago, his friends have often feared he might do some one harm. The wonder is that the Blish incident in his family has not ended in a tragedy long ago.

Blish has been an admirer of Mrs. Betts for years. Betts idolized his wife and was unsuspicious. He had plenty of money and gave her everything she wanted. His portion from his father's estate was $200,000. That came to him on his father's death, about eight years ago. At that time Mr. and Mrs. Betts lived in Halsey street. Blish frequently visited the house. His attentions were looked on as those of a friend.

While Blish kept the Doolittle house in Oswego, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Betts lived there, and everybody was familiar with the scandal but Mr. Betts. Betts had bought out a mineral sping and was devoting his time to bottling and selling the water, while Blish was spending his time in Mrs. Betts' company and sinking her money in a losing venture. Mrs. Betts is a very imposing and attractive looking woman. She expressed the utmost contempt for her husband and was infatuated with the stalwart hotel keeper.

From Oswego Mrs. Betts and the five children went to Europe. She then had in her possession a large portion of $100,000 her husband had given her. The oldest child was Charles, about 17 years old, and the second one Viola, about 15. They saw much more of Blish than they did of their own father, for he followed them to Europe. Betts discovered this, and for the first time suspected his wife's fidelity.

Then there was trouble, but Mrs. Betts and Blish became more bold. The woman took her children to spend last summer at Livingstone Manor, Sullivan county. They boarded at the Davis house. Blish went along. There they spent the whole summer and went away together. It is believed that Mrs. Betts returned to her husband. The strongest evidence presented to show that there was no improper conduct at Livingstone Manor is that separate bills were rendered Mrs. Betts and Blish.

The next important step in this queer history is the purchase of the Eagle hotel at Peekskill by Blish. He moved into it on January 1 last. Soon thereafter came Mrs. Betts, the five children and wagonloads of furniture. Mrs. Betts brought enough furniture, plate, china and carpets to furnish nearly half of the large hotel. The town speedily became filled with scandal. Mrs. Betts was shunned by the ladies of Peekskill. The most open evidence was given of their regard for each other, and it was generally believed that Mrs. Betts had furnished the money with which the hotel had been furnished.

This brings the story down to a few months ago, when Mrs. Betts and the children went away. She left the furniture behind. No one knew at that time where she had gone. It is now known that she went to Yankton, S. D., in order to secure a divorce.

Clerk Monsarrat, of the Eagle hotel, who knew Mr. Blish some years ago, and Clerk Hardenburg, who got acquainted with him at Livingstone Manor, knew this. Blish boasted of it. "I'm going to marry her just as soon as I can," he said two months ago. One statement is that the children are with her, another that they are at Livingstone Manor.

Blish said lately that the divorce would be secured by November 15, papers having been served on the husband and no defence having been made. He said he would leave on Friday, November 6, for Yankton, and that he and Mrs. Betts would be married as soon as the legal separation had taken place.

It is only reasonable to suppose that the service of the divorce papers on Betts drove him wild and unsettled his already none too evenly balanced mind.

The last member of the family to see the murderer before he started on his errand of blood was a nephew, Walter S. Brewster. Mr. Betts was hurrying down Fulton street, this city, on Monday, when the nephew stopped him to ask about a political matter. Without answering Betts brushed Brewster aside and walked quickly on. He was evidently on his way then to Peekskill.

Arriving there he shot the destroyer of his home and courted arrest.

Mrs. Betts is a daughter of Mrs. Carmen, who lives in New York avenue, between Herkimer street and Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn. Mrs. Betts was the youngest daughter of five sons and a daughter. Two brothers, Edward and George, are members of the Consolidated exchange.

The funeral of Blish will probably take place on Thursday. The dead body lies in the large frame hotel, wept over by the aged mother. Blish's brother-in-law, J. Hunt Smith, was expected in Peekskill last night to take charge of the funeral affairs. Mr. Smith is secretary and general manager of the Norwalk (Conn.) Bleaching and Printing company and one of the leading men of the city.

A watch was put on Betts in White Plains jail last night in order to prevent his doing himself bodily harm. It is feared that he will attempt his life.

Edward Betts, a nephew of Henry L. Betts, said that the sunstroke his uncle had had so seriously affected him that a short time after his marriage, about the time he attained his majority, he became violently insane while calling on his father one day. A pet dog coming into the parlor where he was he seized him, but it was necessary to bind him before he could be kept quiet.

For two years after this he was in an asylum in White Plains, and though discharged as cured he has always been erratic.

Betts' marriage with Miss Carman was a secret one.

WHY HE WAS ARRESTED.

London, Nov. 6.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg states that at the time of his arrest at Berdicheff, in the government of Kieff, Russia, Mr. Joseph Pennell, the artist employed by the London Illustrated News and the Scribners, American publishers, was engaged in making sketches of the various Russian prisons and forts in the vicinity and surrounding country.

AN INCREASED TARIFF.

Montevideo, Nov. 6.—It is proposed to increase the tariff on all articles from Uruguay entering Brazil. This causes great uneasiness in commercial circles. Merchants are urging the government to come to some arrangement with Brazil that will have the effect of benefiting the commerce of both countries.

DAVIS' REMAINS.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6.—The remains of Jefferson Davis are to be interred in Hollywood cemetery here. Mrs. Davis expressed her earnest desire to make Richmond her future home, and said that it was no longer a question of anything but means. The monument to Mr. Davis will not be placed over the grave, but upon some site in the city to be selected hereafter.

Quail Shooting.

The quail shooting season opens next Tuesday and the local sporting fraternity are all agog over the coming sport and thinking, no doubt, how the poor "Bob Whites" will have to suffer when they get after them. The present season promises to be a very good one, as the birds are said to be quite plenty in the country.

THE QUESTION OF PENSIONS

Some Amendments Asked for From Congress.

Pension Legislation Is Still Crude, Although Law Makers Have Been Fixing It for Twenty-five Years.

Washington, Nov. 6.—The annual report of the assistant secretary of the interior having charge of pensions and pension appeals for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1891, has been submitted to the secretary of the interior.

The report shows the disposition of pension claims from July 1, 1890, to June 30, 1891, and also a supplemental statement covering the work up to Oct. 1, 1891.

Assistant Secretary Bussey says that from an early date in the history of our pension system, there has prevailed, under different administrations, conflicting opinions as to the power to enforce the reimbursements of money paid in excess for pensions in conformity with either inaccurate or illegal certificates issued through mistakes, either of fact or of law, in the adjudication of claims by the bureau of pensions, and, in the absence of a clear legal provision on the subject, the government has been compelled to submit to serious losses of money, which, having been once improperly paid, either to claimants or to pensioners, were irrecoverable under any established rule of departmental practice.

He recommends that congress make special provision in regard to these cases.

Gen. Bussey recommends that congress amend the first clause of section 3 of the act of June 27, 1890, in regard to the list of applications for widows' pension under this section which, when according to law, the claimant has been necessarily denied pension because the soldier, on whose death the claim was based, although serving "ninety days or more in the army or navy," as shown by the evidence, had not been "honorably discharged" prior to death, but had died on individual furlough or when absent from the technical line of duty in the service.

He urges that congress amend this section so that it will be applicable to such meritorious cases of dependence and distress.

He also recommends that persons who served in the confederate army and who afterwards enlisted in the navy of the United States be given the same pensionable rights as were granted to those who enlisted in the federal army.

WORTH LOOKING AT.

"Turn to the press—its teeming sheets survey, big with the wonders of each passing day." Among these the eye will pause to look at an old familiar family need in new dress. It will charm the sight, comfort the weary, and bring cheer and hope to the pain-stricken. The columns of this paper are graced by its reappearance. It is welcome, for what it promises to do, it does with alacrity, and proves its promise by an ample show of performance. The right thing, in the right place, at the right time, experience has proved it to be. Upon this it has won public confidence and esteem, for while St. Jacob's Oil, the great remedy for pain, thus makes its annual rounds and renews its pledges of prompt and permanent cure, its continual success is the guaranty that what it says is true and what it does is sure. Its best reputation is its true reputation, upon which all may depend for cure and comfort.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Pretty Art Books----Dainty Calendars.

Good Stories for All the Year Round—"A Sister to Esau"—"An Utter Failure"—Magazine and General Notes.

"Watch, Ho! Watch! or Life's Deep Sea," by Elizabeth N. Little, is the prettiest nautical souvenir that has been sent out for many a day. Selections are made from the poems of Havergal, Hale and other writers, and the pencil of the artist has blended them with sea waves, sailors' knots, sea moss, sea gulls, signals, emblems, and ocean clouds, in the most graceful and beautiful fashion. The printing is exquisitely done. The letters are formed of cable and an ocean-blue tint gives tone to all the sketches. The souvenir is in large album form, and contains nineteen full-page pictures and thirteen pages of black and white verse done in cable letters with deep sea tints and glimpses.

It is difficult to conceive of a more beautiful sea memory than this creation by Elizabeth Little. She is fortunate in her publishers—Dodd, Mead & Co. (N. Y.). For sale in Toledo by Brown, Eager & Hull.

"The Brownie Paper Dolls," by Florence E. Cory, is a quaint conceit for the little ones. There is "Uncle Sam," front and back, on stiff paper (ready to cut out and mucilage together), the "Dude," "Ah Sir," and other familiar characters. Great delight and amusement in it, for 75 cents. Directions accompany the pages.

One of the phenomenas in literature, is the everlasting quality of Mother Goose's rhymes. A small museum could be collected of the different forms and fashions in which they have been presented. Maud Humphrey's "Mother Goose" for the holidays of '91-'92 is one of the daintiest and quaintest of them all. On fine card paper, in soft-hued prints, we have dear little Bo Peep with her shepherd's crook, her fat little hands rubbing the tears from her eyes. Then there's Boy Blue, so bewitchingly sweet and innocent in his stolen slumber, you want to put him in a frame for the wall. Tom Tucker, Lucy Locket, Jack Horner, and all the other favorites are there in their prettiest dresses, with faces and gestures to fit the immortal verse that goes with them.

From the same house comes the "Society Calendar," being a reproduction, fac simile, on large, fine card pages, of twelve water color designs by Francis Day. The months are represented by full-length figures appropriately costumed and employed. An exquisite gift for $1.75.

The "Four Little Darkeys" Calendar will cause a smile, seen on any mantel or writing table. One holds her hat, on which are imprinted the first three months of the year, the second her palm-leaf fan with April, May and June; the next, July, August and September on a sea-side shade, and the last of the quartet, the winter months on a muff. The same in fashion and in price, is the "Four Little Musicians"—tiny maidens in Kate Greenaway costumes, playing the violin, the guitar, the tamborine and the banjo, respectively, and on their instruments are printed the calendars, according to the seasons. Price, 50 cents.

"Song of the Sea," illustrated by Reynolds Beal and published by Frederick Stokes & Co., is a beautiful sea album; the verses are chosen with fine literary taste and the accompanying illustrations in tints of brown, and of blue, illustrate the text with most delicate touch. The paper is of the finest card quality and the lines are clear and beautiful as to print. The bible texts furnish some of the most exquisite pages.

These holiday albums and calendars (except the first one noticed), are published by the Art Publishing House of Fred'k A. Stokes & Co., N. Y., and sold in Toledo by Brown, Eager & Hull.

In announcing "A Sister to Esau," Amelia E. Barr's latest work, her publishers, Dodd, Mead & Co., are able to catalogue fifteen novels from her pen bound in uniform style, selling for $1.25 each. Few story readers are so young that they cannot remember when this brilliant story writer's work was first given to the public. It is a marvel that with the utmost diligence she has done so much. It is a greater marvel that doing so much it is still all done so well. The scene of "A Sister of Esau" is mainly laid "somewhat north of Elie, where the grand coast of Fife runs backward into lovely valleys and green pastures," though glimpses of Edinburgh and London are given. It is written of the time when Scotsmen made a sturdy stand for the Free Kirk against the queen and her representative, the Marquis of Bute. The principal character of the work is Angus Bruce, one of the protesting clergy. Of the decisive meeting he told the story as follows:

"Dr. Welsh, as the moderator, made the complaint for the kirk. * * * Then, advising all who were for the free kirk to withdraw, taking with them the confession of faith and the standards of the kirk of Scotland, he bowed to Lord Bute, left his chair and turned to the door. Dr. Chalmers lifted his hat and followed him—then Campbell of Monzie—and Dr. Gordon and Dr. McFarlane—and man after man—and row after row—till on the benches that had been so crowded there was scarce a man left. In a few silent and solemn minutes four hundred ministers and five hundred elders had withdrawn. * * * Many were weeping. I have no doubt all were praying."

Who, however far from the Calvinistic Presbyterian faith, can read this without a thrill of pride in these heroic sufferers for conscience sake, for by that act every minister of them lost church, home and living.

The theological controversy is, however, but a small part of the book. Its love story is the mainspring of all, and its heroine, Scotia Rodney, is well worthy to be the helpmete of such a man as Angus Bruce. The course of their two lives was tangled, then sundered, but the end is all the most ardent lover of romance could desire. All the characters are well drawn individually and hit off in such happy touches as this of Scotia's mother: "She had lost three sons in India, and, though a religious person, this was an affliction she found it difficult to forgive the Almighty."

For sale by Brown, Eager & Hull.

"An Utter Failure" is a very pathetic story, but thoroughly wholesome and deeply interesting. Rachel, its heroine, as a girl giving herself away in marriage because she is desperately wooed, not because she loves; as a wife sacrificing everything to a tyrannical husband; as a mother who lives in and for children whom her tenderness repels and her love wearies; as a daughter caring for a worthless father who fears and avoids her—is the "utter failure." The story deals with the life of the woman, rather than of the girl. It is set to a minor key throughout, and though at last joy too great to be borne comes to the heroine, it may well be said that the lesson of the book is that a woman's first duty is to herself, and if she fails to remember what is due her own soul no one else will remember for her. This moral, if it be the moral, is not obtruded. First and last the author seems only bent on evolving her plot, which is beautifully done. Mrs. Miriam Cole Harris, author of Rutledge, is the writer, and D. Appleton & Co., N. Y., publishers.

The Magazines.

The November Century is great in variety and especially rich in illustration. Michelangelo Buonarotti (Italian old masters), by W. J. Stillman, is given first place. Two exceptionally fine engravings by Cole, the Delphian Sybil, and the Cumean Sybil, copied from frescoes in the Sistine chapel, Rome, are the frontispiece pages. Wilbur Fisk Tillet, of the Vanderbilt University, writes of "Southern Womanhood as Affected by the War." The sentiment of the quite lengthy paper which embodies letters from southern women on the subject, can be summed up like this: When southern women lived without need for thought of lowly toil, relieved of all such worry and effort by the labor of slaves, they developed a certain graceful ease, repose, refinement and hospitality, which is not possible, or at least probable of evolution under the new regime. But what she has lost in the culture of leisure that involves a species of helplessness and dependence she has gained in mental strength and self-sustaining qualities that make of her a nobler and more characterful woman. "King's River Canyon," by John Muir, a rival of the Yo Semite, opens the eyes of wonder anew at the grandeur upon grandeur piled in the state of California. The accompanying plates are exquisite enough for any art print in the world. Fine sonnets are presented; of these the Bee reviewer likes best: "The Hunger Strike," by Elizabeth W. Fiske, and "The Sonnet," by Edith Wharton. The papers on Lowell are full of interest. Announcement is made for a magnificent Christmas number.

Belford's Monthly is revived again with a new sub title: "The Democratic Review." Belford & Co., publishers, New York. The current number has a paper by Col. Mosby, on the Gettysburg campaign, "A Wall Street Symposium," by A Veteran Operator, S. J. Peck and Champion Bissell; "Pleasures of Authorship," by Julian Hawthorne, stories and sketches, editorial notes, book reviews, etc., for the old price, 25 cents a copy. One of the valuable papers of the October issue is "Reciprocity Thimblerigging," by T. E. Willson, of New York, who is one of the soundest writers in the country on the tariff question.

The North American Review for November presents three articles to which it calls special attention: "Russian Barbarities and Their Apologist, by Dr. Hermann Adler, chief rabbi of the united Hebrew congregations of the British Empire; "How to Improve Municipal Government," by Mayor Hart of Boston, Mayor Davidson of Baltimore, Mayor of Buffalo, and Mayor Noonan of St. Louis. Summed up, their conclusion is that the best model for a city government is the government of the United States with its distinct executive, legislative and judicial departments. No. 3 is Part I. of "Italy and the Pope," By ex-Prime Minister Crispi, who writes with fully knowledge on this subject. Besides these three articles and the usual variety of Notes and Comments, this number of The Review contains seven notable contributions. Senator Voorhees, of Indiana, puts in a strong "Plea for Free Coinage;" Charles Stewart Smith, president of the New York Chamber of Commerce, in writing on "Our Business Prospects," declares that the shadow of free silver coinage is the one cloud upon the outlook for the country. Madame Adam gives answer to the question, "Are French Novels Faithful to Life?" in the negative. An always timely topic is treated by Mrs. M. E. W. Sherwood in "The Lack of Good Servants." Justin McCarthy, M. P., contributes an entertaining and instructive article on "Women in English Politics," showing that women are doing much more in England than here to control political movements. He thinks that their influence is altogether for good. Stepniak tells "What Americans Can Do for Russia." The results of the collection by census officials of facts relating to mortgages are summed up by the Hon. Robert P. Porter, Superintendent of the Census, under the heading "Public and Private Debts." Mr. Porter considers this among the most important work done in connection with the census.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

Opening of the Shenandoah Engagement—Washington Illustrated.

Realism on the stage has been the cry of the theatre-going public for some time past, and authors and managers have tried experiment after experiment in their efforts to supply the demand. Bronson Howard bore this craving in mind when he wrote his war play, Shenandoah, and the result is, as might be expected from so ingenious a writer, one of the most perfect bits of realism ever witnessed within the four walls of a theatre. It occurs in the third act when there is a gradual change from sunset to twilight and then to the dense gloom of a starless night, through which old Three-Top mountain at the far end of Shenandoah valley looms up like a giant shadow. Presently there is a stir of excitement among the union troops quartered in the valley, for away up near the crest of the huge black mountain can be see the signal lights of the enemy, telegraphing the news of confederate reinforcements. The perspective effect is really wonderful, for the signal lights seem to be at least twenty miles distant, when, as a matter of fact, they are not much over twenty feet from the footlights. The illusion formed by such surroundings naturally adds a thrilling reality to the action taking place on the stage at the time, and makes the beholder forget that it is only a play after all. It is this charm of truth and naturalness which has achieved for Shenandoah its splendid success. A run of 100 nights is considered a long one for most plays, but Shenandoah passed its three hundredth performance at Proctor's Twenty-third Street theatre, New York. The play is on a tour of the largest cities and will also go to Europe, where a long run has been arranged for by its managers. Shenandoah will be at the Wheeler Opera house to-night and to-morrow.

A LADY'S PERIL.

The Dangers to be Apprehended From Catarrh and Consumption at This Time of the Year.

When the tendency of the catarrhal progress is evidently to the chest and lungs, and the hacking cough, loss of flesh, pain in the chest, and failing strength give their unmistakable evidence of predisposition to consumption, the patient should spare no pains and lose no time in arresting what is practical and imminent danger. With the coming of winter, which, if the predictions of the weather prophets are true, will be an unusually severe one, the care of cases like these becomes of even more than usual importance.

Catarrh and Consumption

which go hand in hand, in this climate of ours, should be met at this season with the most faithful, persistent and skillful care. Continued evidence of the result obtained by the skillful personal care and attention of Drs. Copeland and Buffett may be noticed in such cases as that given below by Miss S. Chattinger, who resides at 2521 Cherry street, and is employed at the Toledo Knitting Works on Superior street. Her experience given in her own words is as follows:

"Previous to a year ago last June I had very fair health, but at that time I began to fall and since then the miseries I have endured would baffle description."

Miss S. Chattinger, 2521 Cherry St.

"My trouble began with what I supposed was ague, the bones throughout my entire body ached, my flesh seemed tender and sore to the touch, I had a headache nearly every day, I was always dull and drowsy. Then, though it was in the summer time, I would catch cold very easy, my nose would clog up, scales would form on both sides, completely filling the nasal passages. My eyes became weak and watery. The secretions from the head would drop into the throat, irritating it so as to keep me constantly hawking and spitting to keep it clear. In about three months time this condition of affairs had reached the lungs and stomach. I began to have annoying pains through the chest and back, and most peculiar sensations about the heart. For three months I coughed so hard that my throat and stomach were kept continually sore by the strain. I had no appetite and was fast losing flesh and strength, when I was induced to consult Drs. Copeland and Buffett. You can say for me that I cannot too highly recommend these specialists. They had an intelligent understanding of my case from the very start, one by one the symptoms began leaving me until to-day I am a well woman."

This statement can easily be verified by seeing or writing Miss Chattinger at the above address.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE.

Gov. Hill Claims Both Branches Are Democratic.

Republicans Trying to Capture the Senate.

Boies' Plurality Ranging Up to Ten Thousand with the Whole Democratic Ticket Close Behind Him.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Gov. Hill said this morning when asked about the result in the legislature: "I am convinced that we have carried both bodies. The returns show that republicans are making strenuous efforts to count us out in close districts, but the official counts give us a plurality in both branches. We have literally swept the state. Mr. Osborne is undoubtedly elected in the Fifteenth district and the Jefferson county assembly district is democratic. I believe Senator Collins is a winner in the Rennsalaer district."

McKinley's Plurality.

Columbus, Nov. 6.—Chairman Hahn has received through the county chairman the pluralities for governor in every county in the state, and these show McKinley's plurality to be 21,583, and Mr. Hahn is of the opinion that the official announcement will not change these figures 100 either way.

The republican majority in the general assembly continues to grow, and it is now 52 on joint ballot, and may be increased one. Senator Gaumer, in the Muskingum district, is defeated by 63 votes by George Iden, and the republicans also carry the Montgomery district, defeating Senator Marshall. The senate stands 22 republicans to nine democrats, and the house 73 republicans to 34 democrats.

Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Nov. 6.—Complete figures from every county in the state show a plurality of 58,889 for Gregg, republican, for auditor-general, and 53,764 plurality for Morrison, republican, for state treasurer. The above computation is made from official returns in nearly all the counties and unofficial footings in the remainder. While Morrison's plurality is over 5,000 less than that of Gregg, he carried every county that gave a majority to the head of the ticket with the exception of Erie county, the home of Tilden, his democratic opponent. Erie gave Gregg 505 plurality and Tilden 101 plurality. In Allegheny county, Morrison's home, his plurality was 172 greater than that of Gregg.

The Massachusetts Legislature.

Boston, Nov. 6.—Complete returns make the next legislature stand as follows: Senate, republican 23, democrat 17. House, republican 150, democrat 89, prohibition 1. In this summary all independent-republicans are counted as republicans, and all independent democrats as democrats.

Fulton, Official.

McKinley, 2,665; Campbell, 1,720; Ashenhurst, 279; Seitz, 97.

McKinley to Campbell.

Columbus, Nov. 6.—(Special)—Governor McKinley answered Gov. Campbell's message of congratulation as follows:

"Governor James E. Campbell:

"Permit me to thank you most heartily for your cordial congratulations. I rejoice that the heated contest through which we have passed has been free from bitterness and prsonalities, and leaves with us feelings of mutual regard.

WM. M'KINLEY, JR."

Hurrah for Boies.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 6.—Semi-official returns have been received from every one of the 99 counties, which show that Gov. Boies' plurality will be fully 9,000. The other candidates on the democratic state ticket run slightly behind the vote for Gov. Boies, but there is no longer any question that they are all elected.

Auglaize, Official.

Wapakoneta, Nov. 6.—(Special)—The board of elections of Auglaize county completed the canvass of the vote to-day, the following being the official footings: McKinley, 2,100; Campbell, 3,589; Ashenhurst, 96; Seitz, 440.

THE GAS TRUSTEES

Hold a Brief Business Meeting and Transact Some Business.

The board of natural gas trustees held a brief session last evening and passed upon some unimportant business.

Manager Heston reported that a number of factories had been cut off from the gas mains. The institutions were those given in yesterday's Bee. It is understood that other works will be shut off this week.

In order to equalize the distribution of gas in the central part of the city it was decided to extend the 8-inch line in Washington street to the alley between St. Clair and Summit, and also the 8-inch line in the alley from Monroe to Washington.

A number of short lines were ordered laid under the McMahon and Kerlin contracts.

Persons suffering from toothache or tic Doloureux may get some relief by wrapping an incandescent lamp in a cloth and holding it against the cheek as a gentle counter-irritant.

Luncheon Muffins.

BY MARIA PARLOA.

For one dozen muffins use one pint of flour, a generous half pint of milk, two teaspoonfuls of Cleveland's Baking Powder, half a teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of butter and two eggs. Mix the dry ingredients together and rub through a sieve. Melt the butter. Beat the eggs till light and add the milk to them. Add this mixture to the dry ingredients; then stir in the melted butter. Beat the batter vigorously for a few seconds and then put in buttered muffin pans and bake for about twenty minutes in a quick oven.—(Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder, the proportions are made for that.

Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder is perfectly wholesome. It leavens most and leavens best. Try a can.

THE K. L. DELEGATES.

Officers Will Be Here To-Morrow Some Time.

At a late hour this afternoon Secretary Stevens, of D. A. 72, was notified that General Secretary Hayes, of the K. of L., Bookkeeper Sinexon, A. W. Wright, of the general executive board, and other prominent knights left Philadelphia for this city this morning. They will arrive some time to-morrow. Mr. Powderly is not expected until Monday evening.

"Charley" Litchman will be one of the representatives of the Massachusetts state assembly this year. "Charley" has been working for the republican ticket in Northern New York this past campaign, with his usual success.

Milton George, delegate from the redoubtable and immortalized "49" of New York city, is on hand. Speaking of the late election he had only this to say: "The knights have put three reliable K. of L. men in the state assembly, and we are solidly for ballot reform.

The invitations to the reception at Memorial hall next Tuesday evening have been sent out. The invitations to the platform are almost exclusively extended to the clergy and to representatives of labor organizations. Mayor Emmick has been asked to preside.

ALIEN CONTRACT LABOR.

The Tiffin Case Goes Over to the U. S. Court.

Commissioners Hall and Beckham Pass Upon Several Cases and All Will Come Up at the December Term.

United States Commissioner Beckham yesterday afternoon heard the charges preferred against Louis Stenger, who is the defendant and not the Belgian Glass company in the foreign contract labor case referred to in the Bee yesterday.

It appeared from the evidence that Stenger was in Europe recently and that several glassworkers returned with him on the same ship.

Stenger was formerly foreman of the Belgian Glass company of Tiffin, but has no longer any connection with that institution.

It appears that Stenger, while foreman of the Belgian glass works, wrote to Europe for men, and it also appears that the men were brought here to take the place of union labor.

There is nothing in the statement that the men came here prior to the enactment of the foreign contract labor law. Mr. Beckham says if such had been the case the warrant would never have been sworn out.

The suit is not against the company but against Stenger, who was bound over in the sum of $500 to the December term of the United States court. He gave bond.

Before Commissioner Hall Chas. Garlack, Nevada street, East Toledo, was charged with failing to deface the stamp on a beer keg. He was bound over in $100 to the next term of the United States court.

In the United States court yesterday H. P. Tobey, Water street, had the schooner N. P. Goodale libelled for $10 due him. The case, it is understood, has been settled.

Quite a number of important cases will come up for trial in the term of the United States court, which opens here December 1.

Conrad Fenfrock, of Fostoria, was bound over in the sum of $200 by United States Commissioner Beckham yesterday for failing to properly expose his excise stamp.

MURDEROUS BRUTES.

Two Deliberate Attempts at Wife Murder That Came Near Being Successful.

David Weaver, a tough character living up the canal, was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of abusing family, but the evidence in the case showed that Weaver came near committing a murder Wednesday night, and the victim was his wife. He went home that night crazy drunk, and after abusing his wife and calling her many vile names, made a deliberate attempt to kill her by cutting her throat with a shoe knife. In the struggle Mrs. Weaver's throat was badly scratched with the knife and her arm and hand cut in several places. The only reason that the brute did not succeed in his villainous purpose was because he was too drunk.

It was an aggravated case and Judge Sala fined him $50 and costs and sentenced him to 90 days in the workhouse.

Weaver is a bad man, and frequently figures in police court, besides which he served a term in the penitentiary some time ago.

Michael Nitz is another of the same kind, and early yesterday morning made a desperate attempt to shoot his wife, and also threatened to shoot himself, but was prevented by the assistance which arrived in answer to the screams of the woman. His case will be heard to-morrow.

STREET RAILWAYS.

The Council Committe to Make Another Attempt to Approve an Ordinance.

The council committee on railways will meet this evening and again tackle the long suffering general street railway ordinance. The bob-tail cars are the thorn in this ordinance and have proved the obstacle which has delayed. The Consolidated does not want to put safety gates on the short cars or to equip them wih conductors, while several of the councilmen are determined that both these shall go on all cars large or small. It is impossible to predict what the result will be, but it is more than likely that the railroads will have it their own way as they have with every other matter that comes up.

IN THE SUPREME COURT.

The Case of Rev. Dr. Quigley Against the Board of Education.

A dispatch to the Bee from Columbus this morning gives the following relative to the case of Rev. P. F. Quigley against the Toledo board of education:

The case of Patrick Quigley v. the Board of Education of Toledo, and prosecuting attorney of Lucas county, was held in the supreme court room yesterday. The plaintiff is a Catholic priest, and originally the board of education and prosecutor instituted mandamus proceedings to compel him to furnish for statistical purposes the names and ages of the pupils in the parochial schools in his charge. The case was decided against Father Quigley in the lower courts, and he seeks to have it reopened.

EAST SIDE BANK.

Substantial Movement to Establish the Bank in the Sixth Ward.

A movement is again on foot to organize the bank in East Toledo, and a meeting for that purpose will be held next Monday evening. An attempt was made to establish a bank on the East Side some time ago but it fell through. The effort this time, however, has good backing, and besides the outside capital that will be put in, prominent and influential East Side business men, such as Captain Huntley, Joseph Munch, S. W. Cook, P. Munch & Sons and others have taken hold of the matter and will probably push it through.

HEAVY DAMAGES CLAIMED

For Personal Injury Sustained at the Electric Light Works.

Proceedings were instituted in common pleas court to-day against the Toledo Electric company by George Rabjohns, to recover $20,000 damages for personal injury.

Rabjohns in his petition alleges that on September 17, the Toledo Electric Light company requested him to repair a boiler at the works on St. Clair street; that while inside of the boiler he claims that agents of the company negligently and carelessly turned on a great volume of hot steam and water, by which he was dangerously scalded about the head and body.

DANGEROUS PLACE.

The Market Infested with Petty Thieves and Thugs.

Low Dens on Every Side and the Verdant Farmer the Especial Victim.

It seems strange, but it is a fact nevertheless, that the market space, right under the nose of the police, is the worst thief invested district of the city. Here the gardeners, hucksters and fakirs are crowded all day long, and on both sides of the market are dozens of the worst dives in the city, in the shape of low groggeries and cheap boarding houses. Here the innocent countryman or stranger is lured, and woe betide him if he gets drunk. He may consider himself fortunate if he wakes up with his clothes on.

The thieves that infest the market are mostly of the petty order, and their especial prey is the man who gets about "half seas over," after he has made a trade or sold his wagon load of "truck." Yet they do not disdain to steal a robe or whip from a wagon, or run off a dog while his master is not looking. Not a day passes but some case of thieving is reported to have taken place on the market, or in some of the adjacent saloons.

This is all done in the crowd, or the victim is lured away to some secluded corner, and thus the police are evaded in spite of their watchful supervision of the market. It is seldom that the thieves are not caught, but they give the police force considerable trouble.

This morning a young man named Fred Gremling came into the captain's office with the pitiful story that he had been robbed of his overcoat and $45 in money last night. A little questioning developed the fact that he had been drunk and had no idea of where his loss had occurred, except that it was about the market.

It was on the market that the scoundrel Strandler, who was sent to the workhouse yesterday, plied his nefarious vocation. He had with him a woman who claimed to be his wife, and their business was to have the man get into the confidence of some verdant youth and then steer him off with the woman, and together they lived on the proceeds.

THERE WERE HOPS GALORE

Here and There About the City Last Night

The first annual reception of William Tell Division, No. 16, Uniform Rank, Knights of Phythias, was held at the Pythian castle last evening, and while not as largely attended as it might have been, was nevertheless a success. The capacious hall was handsomely decorated, and the members of the Division in their uniforms, together with the neat toilets of the ladies, added beauty to the scene. Wolff furnished the music, and an elegant supper was served during the intermission in the banquet room. The committees in charge were as follows:

Arrangements—Henry Hoerlein, Philip Wahl, Henry Hill John Luckow, Wm. F. Grolle.

Reception—G. Fleishman, G. Hofer, Wm. Segrist, Albert Neukom, Jos. Wahl, J. Heller, Fred. Hahn.

Floor—First Relief: Fred. Hofer, John Stahl, H. Binde, J. Mencld; second relief: C. Krieger, S. Bussong, H. Schnetzeler.

A military ball was given at Memorial hall by Company A of the Sixteenth Regiment, and, as is always the case with Capt. Weier's direction, nothing was left undone to make the company feel in the best of spirits. Many additions were made to the decorations of the big hall, and the floor was in excellent shape, so that there was no occasion for complaint of any character. Tony Leon's orchestra gave the usual satisfaction. The committees who assisted so materially in arranging for the affair were:

Arrangements—Lieutenant F. C. Roshong, Sergeant F. R. Zurfluh, Corporal H. J. Faulkner, Corporal C. S. Osborne, Private S. T. Rowe.

Reception—Colonel H. S. Bunker, Captain J. M. Weier, Lieutenant E. W. Rydman, Sergeant J. M. Hanline, Private P. J. Archer, Private S. A. Daniels.

Floor—Sergeant F. Stock, Sergeant H. Lutz, Corporal H. J. Faulkner, Corporal F. Potts, Corporal C. J. Osborne, Private Wm. Sayers.

The German Pioneer Society had a sort of a family party at Druid hall, and members enjoyed themselves as only Germans can, each furnishing a share to the pleasure of the evening. The attendance was not large.

The Golden Key club gave a party at Druid hall on Wednesday evening, at which the capacity of the hall was taxed. The members treated their friends handsomely, and the party was voted a success.

BARON HIRSCH'S WEALTH.

Baron Hirsch is said to be worth $100,000,000. He made his wealth chiefly out of contracting for building Turkish and Transylvania railroads. The Rothschilds were his financial backers when he assumed the contracts, but they got the idea that the railroads would not succeed, and therefore withdrew their support. He then secured assistance from big banking firms of Frankfort which he was able to influence through his marriage, and thus obtained funds enough to carry on the great undertaking. European financiers have been surprised by the enormous success of these railroads. They paid from the day they were opened and they made one of the greatest fortunes in Europe for the bold contractor, who pinned his faith to them when others thought him foolhardy. Everything he has since touched has turned to gold. He is a large holder of landed estates and French rentes. It is said his benefactions for several years past have amounted to $1,000,000 annually.

DOM PEDRO'S MEDALS.

Dom Pedro, ex-emperor of Brazil, presented to Drs. Simmola, Charcot and Count de Motto-Mocia, in Versailles, a few days ago, medals which are in many ways unique. They have on one side the portrait of Dom Pedro, while on the other side is the inscription: "Presented to Dr.——, by the Brazilian people, out of gratitude for saving the precious life of their paternal emperor." While the medals were being prepared, the Brazilians drove their "paternal emperor" from the country. They were finished a few weeks ago, under the republic, and were sent to the ex-emperor, who had ordered them, through the Academy of Sciences in Rio de Janeiro.

TWO BRAVE GIRLS.

A few days ago two girls, both handy with a rope or gun, were riding along the highway in Rocky Canon, when unexpectedly they met a bear, says the Wilbur Register. They did not faint or even offer to run. On the contrary, they drew straws to see which would get the first hug. They had often heard of the hugging qualities of a bear, but had never had an opportunity of testing the truth of the statement. During the controversy, however, the bear "took a tumble" and climbed a friendly tree. Of course the girls could not condescend to climb a tree, so one of them rode several miles after a rifle, and in a few minutes after her return the bear was lying on the ground dead.

ILLUSTRIOUS SMOKERS.

Nearly all the poets and members of the literary profession have been addicted to tobacco in one form or another. Milton dearly loved his pipe; Addison, Congreve, Philips, Prior and Steele smoked prodigiously. Sir Walter Scott smoked and so did Campbell. Beattie, Campbell's biographer, says: "Tobacco pipes mingled with the literary wares which filled every corner of the bard's sanctum." It has also been said of him:

"Campbell with lengthy pipe in hand,
Seemed like a god in clover."

Moore, Byron, Hood and Carlyle were equally addicted to the "weed." Lord Tennyson is said to be particularly attached to a long churchwarden, a basketful of which is placed by the side of his writing table, while on the other side is a second basket. As soon as a pipe is finished, the poet throws it into the second basket and charges a fresh one, which is treated in precisely the same way when finished with.

The philosopher Hobbes smoked to excess and lived to be 92; while Sir Isaac Newton, who was never without his pipe, lived to green old age and never lost but one tooth. Samuel Parr was invariably to be discovered "half hidden by fuliginous smoke a yard or so behind the bowl of a large churchwarden." He smoked everywhere, even in the company of ladies. Twenty pipes of an evening was his limit, and he never wrote well without tobacco. As he lived to the ripe old age of 78 years, it is pretty good proof that immoderate use of tobacco is not fatal.—All the Year Round.

THE MOUSTACHE AND CHARACTER.

As the form of the upper lip and the regions about it has largly to do with the feelings, pride, self-reliance, manliness, vanity and other qualities that give self-control, the moustache is connected with the expression of those qualities or the reverse.

When the moustache is ragged and as it were flying hither and thither, there is a lack of proper self-control. When it is straight and orderly the reverse is the case, other things, of course, taken into account.

If there is a tendency to curl at the outer ends of the moustache there is a tendency to ambition, vanity and display. When the curl turns upward there is geniality, combined with love of approbation; when the inclination is downward there is a more sedate turn of mind, not accompanied with gloom. It is worthy of remark that good-natured men will, in playing with the moustache, invariably give it an upward inclination, whereas cross-grained or morose men will pull it obliquely downward.—National Barber.

WEIGHT OF A DOLLAR BILL.

The question came up one day last week at the treasury department as to the weight of a dollar bill. Scales of perfect accuracy were brought into requisition and the surprising discovery was made that 27 81 notes weighed exactly as much as a $20 gold piece. The latter just balances 540 grains. However, the bills weighed were perfectly crisp and new. Trial made with soiled notes, such as come in every day for redemption, showed that 27 of them weighed considerably more than the $20 coin.—Wall Street Daily News.

DANIEL WEBSTER'S DIRTY HANDS.

As a boy in the rude village school at Salisbury (now Franklin), N. H., says the Hartford Times, Daniel Webster was not free from the small pranks and mischiefs in which boys of a dozen years are (or used to be) apt to indulge even in school hours. It was a whipping then for almost everything, and the master, a hard disciplinarian, had called Daniel up to his chair.

"I used to have, I am sorry to say it," said the statesman, "as a schoolboy, very dirty hands. On being called up to be 'ferruled'—the customary form of punishment then—I covertly and hastily licked one hand to make it more presentable, and hurriedly wiped it by rubbing it on my sleeve, after getting up from my seat.

"'Hold out your hand!' was the command, and out went the hand I had tried to lick.

"'Dan,' exclaimed the master in a reproving tone, looking at the dirty little paw, 'if you can show me a dirtier hand than that in this school, I'll let you off.'

"Immediately," added Webster, "I thrust out the other hand! The schoolmaster was stumped. But he was as good as his word; he let me off."

TOLEDO, OHIO, NOVEMBER 6, 1891.

The only phenomenon that hasn't been duly accounted for since election is the remarkable fall of water in Lake Michigan.

The Buffalo News, staunch republican, takes no share in the Tammany tiger cry; it says in so many words "the republican ticket died of Plattism."

If it be decided last and for all by the courts that we had no right whatever to detain or to pursue the Itata, then the administration would better apologize to Chili, call Minister Egan home and hunt another vent for its bluster.

Heretofore Mr. Griffin has been the representative from Lucas county, his side partner in the house being contented to simply vote. Now Brother Griffin must look well after his laurels. Mr. Flickinger will have a voice as well as a vote in the proceedings of the legislature.

Brazil is again on the eve of revolution. Arbitration, peace-and-good-will, reciprocity and all things lovely and of good report—on paper—count for nothing. Secretary Blaine as mentor and supreme reserve mogul of all America seems to be forgotten entirely.

The Irish-American says that "Egan was sent to Chili as the representative of a lot of speculators in nitrates, and these are the interests to which Mr. Egan has been devoting his attention." There is strong suspicion that the I.-A. knows what it talks about, and a stronger suspicion that Minister Egan should be brought home. He certainly isn't representing the people of the United States in his official capacity and his un-official action.

Contrary to expectation and happily surprising to the majority of interested people, the New York Presbytery has dismissed the charge of heresy against Dr. Briggs and he will still teach theology in the Union Seminary. His teachings are "not approved" but apparently are not considered as vitally detrimental to the faith, else different action would have been taken. When Dr. Van Dyke said "what we want to do is to get rid of this case as soon as we can," he knew that he voiced the sentiment of the majority, as the vote of 94 to 39 proved. There was none of the hot blood shown in the meeting that marked the Detroit assembly. The case will go to the New York synod, strengthened for the accused by the present decision.

The financial condition of the city of Toledo can better be balanced after the natural gas field owned by the city shall have a fair opportunity to show its strength. The thousands of friends of the city pipe line not only hope it will exceed their expectations, but they sincerely believe the field will be adequate to amply supply the city. If it shall prove as good as expected the revenue derived from the sale of gas will soon replace the expenditure. If not, time will demonstrate the failure, and then people can face the situation calmly, dispassionately, and for the good of the city. If the coming winter shall be severe, we will all know more about the city gas field before spring than we do at present. Give the field a chance now. It is the captain general of the situation.

One of the first acts of the coming republican legislature will be to so gerrymander Ohio as to give the democrats as few congressional districts as possible. The multitude of would-be republican congressmen in Toledo will be clamorous for a solid district in this corner of the state. It can be done by adding Huron to the present district, but that will make the ratio too large. It is reported that Mr. Flickinger's plan is to completely rearrange the northwest, by putting Lucas, Wood, Fulton, Williams, and Henry or Defiance together. The latter county would suit Mr. Flickinger the better, as he would be able to control the Defiance delegation for the congressional nomination, which he wants himself. Mr. Griffin, who is to be the speaker of the house, may object to his colleague's arrangement, for be it known that the Collingwood statesman will not tarry long in Columbus if he can capture a seat in congress. These two new Richmonds are in the congressional field to plague Kent Hamilton and other old stagers whose congressional lightning rods have become rusty from exposure.

The certain change of the districts will also give Erie county the opportunity of cutting loose from Lucas. The domination of Lucas over the outside counties has long been irksome to the brethren in Sandusky. And, besides politics, there are good business reasons for separating Erie and Lucas. Toledo and Sandusky are commercial cities, each having lake harbors to be improved. A congressman representing either city alone can accomplish more than with both cities included in one district.

There are too many statesmen to the square acre as the present seventh district is composed and the democrats and, for that matter the republicans, may prepare for a general new deal in this section of the state. New combinations must be formed, and new faces will be found in conventions. A jolly time for all of us is in store for 1892.

WOOL AND THE TARIFF.

One of the most thorough students and most logical exponents of political economic questions in this or any country is Hon. David A. Wells. The last issue by the tariff reform club of New York is a paper by Mr. Wells on the all-absorbing topic. He begins by quoting John Sherman on the price of wool in different years as follows:

The price of wool in 1867 was 51 cents a pound; in 1870, 46 cents; in 1876, 43 cents, and at the time he was speaking, 36 to 40 cents, to which he added that the effect of protecting the wool growers had been to reduce the price of domestic wools.

Mr. Sherman didn't say this during a campaign when high protection was the issue. He has a way of saying things to suit occasions and this was another occasion. It happened some years ago, before the apostle of latter day republicanism had arisen to proclaim that the great panacea for all national ills was taxation; and that men's businesses should be regulated by the government, giving and taking as the officers of the government were persuaded.

Mr. Wells' paper is devoted chiefly to this question. He finds that the domestic product is about five pounds per head of the population, while nine and a fifth pounds, or 275,000,000 annually, more than we produce is required. In reviewing the history of wool tariff from the year 1867, his showing of the intricacies, the unwarrantable interferences in the way of legislation, are enough to fully justify the opinion of the United States Judge who is quoted as saying that he could scarcely resist the conviction that the laws were changed in congress with the view to make them ambiguous enough to result in tens of thousands of lawsuits and the re-payment of duties of the government after they had once been paid by the consumer.

And what has been the result of all this restrictive legislation on wool during the last quarter of a century? The consumption of woolen fabrics has been less than it would have been if the raw material had come into the country free. Imports have increased instead of diminished, and the price of domestic wool has declined oftener in its fluctuations than it has advanced. In twenty years following 1867 the date of high tariff protection, the increase of domestic production was 70 per cent.; of the imported product 300 per cent. So protection failed of its avowed object in both instances and the consumer paid larger price for his goods. The worst feature in the case is the imposition of worthles imitation on the consumer for wool fabrics. In 1870 the imports of shoddy, waste and rag-tag to be worked over for the buyer-and-wearer (and for which he pays good all-prices) were 512,792 per cent.; in 1880, 1,380,233 pounds; in 1889, 8,662,209 pounds, and the increase of the import and use for the two years following will be fully a third more than for 1889. Dealers in wool fabrics will tell you this. A Toledo merchant who doesn't talk business out of his house, but who is too honest to falsify, told the Bee that the complaint was loud and came every day that there was no wear at all in the cheaper grades of men's and boys' clothing sold to-day. A recent article in the New York Dry Goods Economist shows, by analysis made at the instance of the paper, the great increase in the use of cotton in the manufacture of woolen fabrics.

And what is shoddy? Mr. Wells has made a study of the subject and finds it consists of rags collected from all manner of places, hospitals and the slums in cities, so loathsome as a mass that no method of "be-deviling" and purification could reconcile a person to the thought of its rehabilitation for his own use. Yet this is what is being done as the increase in both imports and domestic production of shoddy material proves.

Mr. Wells makes plain statements from official figures and if "results tell" what has a high protective tariff done for the wool grower and the wool wearer in this country. The consumer pays wool prices and receives shoddy and the price of the raw product has gone down in the market since the McKinley bill became law. It is not answer to say, look at the vote of Ohio for McKinley. Half the world wanted to murder Galileo for saying the world was round when everybody knew it was flat. The study of the question is not ended or the interest in it one whit abated because a plurality of votes in the state of Ohio places the prince of high-taxers in the gubernatorial chair.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Analyzing the Vote for Sheriff.

To the Editor: In 11 precincts (8 in the city and 3 outside) Harry Dowling received 215 republican votes. The same ratio in the remaining 54 precincts give him 1,235 republican votes in Lucas county; enough to have elected him by more than 500 majority had he received his own party vote. In the 11 precincts referred to he was cut by 201 democrats.

THIRD WARD REPUBLICAN.

Nov. 6, 1891.

A Profitable Exchange.

What a so-called "brilliant foreign policy" can do for this country is shown by our recent humiliation in Hayti and our present embarrassing situation in Chili. We could well spare some brilliancy in exchange for honesty and common sense in our dealings with other nations.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Love in a Cottage.

A current news note says that Miss Gwendolen Caldwell, of Baltimore, is about to build a $1,000,000 cottage. "Love in a cottage" is not such a terribly bad thing after all under favorable circumstances.—Chicago Mail.

Looks That Way.

One of the all-absorbing questions of the day is, will Egan be recalled? Having kept him at Santiago so far we presume the president will continue him there till the Chilians kick him out.—New Orleans New Delta.

All Rejoice, Except—

One of the peculiar advantages of this election is that pretty much everybody can find something to rejoice over—unless it be the Harrison-Platt combination, who did not save very much.—Philadelphia Times.

THE WORKHOUSE BOARD

Release Some Prisoners on Parole and Remit the Fines on Others.

The workhouse board met in regular monthly session yesterday afternoon.

The sum of $781.52 was realized from the sale of brick during the month.

Peter Larken, George Ebar and Jacob Ames were released on parole.

The fines hovering over Peter Hayes and John K. Kohn were remitted.

Dr. Hipp, workhouse physician, reported 116 visits to the institution for the month.

The city gas trustees submitted a proposition to supply the works with gas at 6 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, the board to pay for the meter and advance the cash to lay the line. No action was taken in the matter.

W. C. T. U.

The Union of Unions Hold the Regular Meeting at Third Street M. E. Church.

The Union of unions met at the East Side Methodist church yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The meeting opened with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Brown, after which the secretary's report was read and accepted.

Reports from the different committees of the W. C. T. U. convention were given and disposed of, a vote of thanks being tendered to those who so efficiently performed their duties.

Mrs Eck, chairman of the finance committee, presented a motion that as there was about $20 left after paying all indebtedness that the amount be subdivided among the local unions which had contributed to the Union of unions for the W. C. T. U. convention. After a discussion the motion was carried.

Mrs. Ellen S. Fray then talked to the ladies on woman suffrage and requested that an association be formed on the East Side, and the following ladies were placed on a committee to select a place and time for Mrs. Fray to meet the ladies of the East Side who are interested in the cause. Mrs. L. C. Myers, chairman; Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Bartlett and Mrs. Consaul.

The ladies were pleased with the fact that there were several gentlemen present at their meeting yesterday, among whom was Rev. S. L. Roberts. The gentlemen were in favor of woman suffrage and W. C. T. U. work and testified to that effect.

The next meeting will be held at the Central Congregational church on the first Thursday in December, when the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

BIG FAILURE.

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 6.—It is now stated that the liabilities of Wels Bros., wholesale dry goods dealers who failed yesterday, will amount to three-quarters of a million.

COMMITTEE WORK.

Commencement of Considerable City Legislation.

St. Clair Street Bridge in a Dangerous Condition—The Oliver Street Sidewalk Again.

The council chamber presented a lively scene last evening and several committees held sessions, some of them quite lengthy.

The committee on harbor and commerce and bridges had before them a communication from Harbormaster Sseldon stating that the beams and planking of the old St. Clair street bridge are in a very bad condition, and that the bridge is unsafe for teams and cars.

The harbormaster was present and asked that the bridge be condemned as unsafe.

The committee requested the harbormaster to present to the committee at the next meeting an estimate of the cost of putting the bridge in shape.

The harbormaster also called the attention of the committee to the fact that the gearing of the Cherry street bridge is much worn. He likewise asked what was to be done with the Lafayette street bridge, which has been in a useless condition all summer. The committee resolved that the harbormaster should make temporary repairs according to a resolution previously passed by the council.

* * *

The street committee approved ordinances to turnpike Oak street in Irenville; to turnpike Bay street from the River road to Tiffin avenue; to establish the grade of Newberry street; to establish the grade of Segur avenue east of Bloomfield street and to establish the grade of Park street.

A resolution was approved to grade Park street from South street to Western avenue.

Resolutions were approved to pave Dove Lane from Cherry to Walnut; to pave Fourteenth street from Washington to Monroe.

An ordinance was approved which changes the name of McCloud avenue, Bedortha avenue and county road 339 so that the whole shall be called Wheeling avenue.

An ordinance to provide for keeping Oliver street clean was laid over.

The sidewalk committee was treated to another long dissertation on Oliver street, and the fight was lively for awhile. Dr. Reed was there, backed by a goodly number of property owners who want the walk put in the center of the bed and the trees removed. Mr. Whitker was also on hand with a large representation of the other side. Since last Monday night, when the matter was before the council, the people on the street had not been able to come to any agreement, and so they appeared before the committee just as ready to fight as they had been at previous meetings.

After a long discussion the committee decided to put part of the walk in the old bed, where it would save the trees, and to put part in the new bed where the property owners wanted it. According to this the walk will be in the new bed from North Railroad avenue to Logan street, in the old bed from Logan to Newton, and in the new from Newton to Williams.

* * *

After a brief debate on the subject the market committee decided to go ahead with the construction of the extension to the Superior street market.

* * *

A number of property owners appeared before the sewer committee and objected to the assessment on the sewer in the alley between Ewing and Lenk streets from Indiana avenue to Germania street. They claimed that there had been extravagance in the construction of the sewer and specially objected to the price of the lumber used. The matter was referred to the engineer for adjustment.

An ordinance was adopted for a sewer in the alley between Bartlett and Washington streets from Wells to Lawrence avenue.

Legislation was also adopted for a sewer in the alley south of Walbridge avenue.

ALFRED C. NOBBS,

The Man Who Picked the Chubb Lock, Is Dead.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 6.—Alfred C. Nobbs, formerly general manager of the Union Metallic Cartridge company, died early this morning from an affection of the brain.

In 1851 he went to London to attend the first exhibition and caused some excitement by picking the well-known Chubb and Bramah locks. He was at one time in charge of the Howe sewing machine.

QUAY AND MAHONE.

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 6.—Ex-Senator Wm. Mahone, of Virginia, met Senator Quay and party on arrival at Petersburg yesterday and accompanied the party to Florida, where a stay of a fortnight will be made.

Senator Quay and his friends greeted Mr. Mahone very warmly. The senator expressed himself as well pleased with the result of Tuesday's elections in Pennsylvania.

COULD NOT HOLD HIM.

Paris, Nov. 6.—The workman Vaucourt, who was arrested late last evening on suspicion of being the murderer of the man whose nude and headless body was found in the cellar of a house in the Rue Charonne, has been discharged from custody, there being no evidence upon which to hold him.

THE STRIKE OFF.

St. Louis, Nov. 6.—The strike that has been in progress at the tin plate department of the St. Louis Stamping company's mills was officially declared off by Ivory lodge, Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, a few days ago, and yesterday all of the men went to work, including the skilled laborers from abroad.

KILLED HIS PROSECUTORS.

Rome, Nov. 6.—At Sassari, in Sardinia, a discharged convict named Derosas, actuated by a desire for revenge, shot and killed Dr. Usini and a male and female peasant, all of whom had been witnesses against him in the trial at which he had been convicted.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett is devoted to the memory of her dead son, Lionel, who was the original of Little Lord Fauntleroy. Gen. Bernardo Reys, governor of the State of Nuevo Leon, Mexico, has ordered an American saloon in the city of Monterey to remove a picture of George Washington, which has been placed over the front of the doorway, the governor giving as his motive that he did not think that a likeness of the immortal Washington ought to be placed over the doorway of a mere drinking house.

TRAINING THE BIRD OF PEACE FOR WAR.

Five homing-pigeons were started from the naval academy at 11 o'clock to-day for Washington. They were expected to reach their destination in an hour. The birds made a bee-line for Washington in a heavy northwest wind. Professor Marion, of the naval academy, has contributed several articles on the advisability of establishing a homing-pigeon service, and his efforts in that direction have been recognized by the government. A number of experiments will take place between Annapolis and Washington during the winter, and later the birds will be trained for sea-service. Twenty-one birds from Key West are now at the naval academy.—Baltimore Sun.

AFFECTION OF THE SEAL.

One That Refused To Be Returned to Its Native Element.

I once heard of a boy who had a pet seal given to him when it was quite young, says a writer in the Illustrated American. It became very tame and used to cuddle up beside the dogs to sleep in front of the fire and learned to perform very many tricks. One winter the storms were very severe and the fishermen were at times quite unable to venture to sea to set their nets. As a matter of course fish was scarce, and the seal's food having been of fish alone, milk had to be substituted; but it consumed such vast quantities of the latter that, for purposes of economy, after a family council, it was decided to dispose of the beloved pet as soon as possible. The boy and a clergyman friend who had always taken a lively interest in the pet started off in a boat with their precious victim, and, when far enough out for safety, threw the seal into the water. Little did they expect the result, for the creature, feeling itself very much abused, rushed after the boat with all its might, uttering such tearful and heartrending cries of grief that it was at last taken back into the boat, where it lay exhausted, sobbing and wailing like a child. When the familiar home was reached it soon regained its former gayety and health and lived to a good old age, little the worse for its adventure.

DR. REANEY'S $16,000 CHAIN.

Dr. Reaney, of Melbourne, who recently died, was once the owner of a very interesting bit of jewelry, a magnificent chain composed of a series of links of beautifully chased gold, studded with precious gems. It was the work of a Melbourne jeweler, and cost $16,000. In 1878 Dr. Reaney visited England en Prince, spending $25,000 on the trip. He brought his remarkable chain with him, and made excellent use of it by converting the beautiful links into brooches, and presenting one to each English lady whose hospitality he had enjoyed.

NO MORE SOCIALIST BABIES.

By order of the German emperor the Prussian minister of the interior has forbidden parents to baptize their children with political names or a certain character or color. Young Germans may be christened with names from the Bible, or princes, or of "loyal" statesmen, generals, and patriots. This measure is intended to prevent socialists from commemorating in their own families prominent revolutionists. "Robespierre" has long been a very favorite name for socialist babies.

THE BANKERS OF OHIO.

They Have Formed a Permanent Organization.

Interesting Meeting Held in the Capital City Yesterday—Officers Elected.

Columbus, November 6.—A convention of Ohio bankers was held here yesterday to form a permanent association for the interchange of views and dissemination of knowledge on financial questions.

Delegates were present from every section of the State, about 125 banking houses being represented. Mr. P. W. Huntington, of Columbus, called the convention to order, and introduced Hon. William G. Deshler, of this city, who delivered an eloquent address of welcome. Mr. W. J. Chamberlain, of Tiffin, was chosen temporary chairman, and Mr. S. B. Rankin, of South Charleston, temporary secretary.

Mr. Chamberlain made a speech of some length, in which he said that it would be well to talk over plans of organization and extract information from the constitution and by-laws of the bankers' association in Kentucky, Kansas, and Michigan.

All of these constitutions showed that the purpose of organization was to promote the usefulness of the banks to the Commonwealth, to bring about a more intimate acquaintance through periodic meetings, and to collect and disseminate useful information.

Mr. Chamberlain said that he had called upon bankers in all parts of the State and discussed with them the feasibility of organization, and all were greatly in favor of the plan, so the call had been made. The chairman suggested that a committee on constitution and by-laws be appointed.

A committee was appointed to prepare a constitution and by-laws. The committee submitted its report and it was unanimously adopted. The report was prefaced by the following, which sets forth the objects of the association:

In order to promote the general welfare and usefulness of banks and banking institutions and to secure uniformity of action, together with the practical benefits to be received from personal acquaintance and from the discussion of subects of importance to the banking and commercial interests of the state of Ohio; and especially in order to secure the proper consideration of questions regarding the financial and commercial usages, customs, and laws which affect the entire banking interest of the entire state, and for protection against losses by crime, we have submitted a constitution and by-lays for the Ohio Bankers' association.

A permanent organization was perfected, with the following officers:

President—J. W. Chamberlain, Tiffin.

Vice President—A. T. Estabrook, Dayton.

Secretary—S. B. Rankin, South Charleston.

Treasurer—H. F. Harding, Coshocton.

Executive Committee—M. M. White, Cincinnati; P. W. Huntington, Columbus; J. J. Sullivan, Cleveland; D. C. Winegartner, Newark; C. E. Niles, Findlay; A. E. Wagner, Akron; John H. Thomas, Springfield; M. M. Jameson, Batavia; and C. N. Smick, Latonia.

The executive committee was instructed to prepare a programme for the next meeting. There was considerable discussion as to where the association should meet next year.

Mr. J. J. Sullivan made a gallant effort to secure the meeting for Cleveland, but was unsuccessful, it being decided to meet in Columbus the first Thursday after the fall elections.

SHEEP BREEDERS.

Important Action Taken at the National Meeting.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Previous to final adjournment of the national sheep breeders' convention last evening, John L. Thompson, of Arcana, Ind., and S. H. Todd, of Wakeman, O., were appointed a committee to pass upon all entries for the next American fat stock show, to be held in Chicago.

A resolution was passed that it would be better to reduce the time of the live-stock exhibit at the world's fair from 90 to 30 days. Further that no limit to the time of ownership of animals previous to their entrance was necessary and that the date of entries close 30 days previous to the opening of the exposition.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Chicago on or about November 15, 1892.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Lyon Mountain, N. Y., Nov. 6.—While Mrs. Robare, a hard-working widow, was absent from home yesterday, the children set fire to the house, and the youngest, aged 3, was burned to death. The building was totally destroyed. Two men who were boarding with the woman lost $700 cash, which they had saved and laid away in their trunks.

RECEIVER BEAL

Boston, Nov. 6.—Mr. Thos. P. Beal has had his bond as receiver of the Maverick bank approved by the court. The assets of the bank cannot be handed over to him by the examiner until an inventory has been made and Mr. Beal's receipt taken therefor. This will require a delay of several days.

TO BRACE UP THE FIRM.

Boston, Nov. 6.—Mr. Charles Raymond, of Chicago, brother of Wm. Raymond, of Thomas Dana & Co., will, it is said, put $100,000 into the new firm and all merchandise liabilities will be assumed.

THINGS THEY DON'T TELL.

If the newspapers gave all the news they get hold of, there would scarcely be a day that there would not be a sensation to dish up. In an office in the Produce Exchange yesterday a number of gentlemen were discussing among themselves the good things the newspapers missed, a recent banking incident, in which a clerk came pretty near getting himself and a young lady into a pile of trouble. The story was new to all the party save the teller of it, and yet the newspapers could have printed the full particulars two weeks before. But what was the use? The publication of the particulars would have possibly lost the young man his position, and it would have caused a certain young lady great mortification and annoyance. The newspapers don't print all the news, not by a long shot.

A well known jeweler went home one night not long since and in some way failed to turn off the gas, or rather he failed to light it after turning it on. The result was that the next morning two physicians were called in and spent several hours in trying to bring him back to life. Why were the particulars not printed? Simply because it was found upon investigation, that he had met a friend, and looking upon wine when it was red went home and actually blew out the gas. It was an accident the publication of which would have created somewhat of a scandal and injured the business interests of a strong firm of business men. It would also have caused a great deal of pain to the man's intimate friends and family.

Not over a week ago the bookkeeper of a well known firm, in a spirit of deviltry, closed the heavy doors of the office vault on the office boy. A runaway on the street attracted the attention of the bookkeeper, and the little fellow in the vault was forgotten. This was at noon, when the bookkeeper was at dinner—a mile away—he remembered having locked the lad in and he rushed at once for the office. When the doors of the vault were opened the boy was found lying on the floor of the vault unconscious. At first he was supposed to be dead, but the doctors brought him through. The facts were kept quiet and the bookkeeper made it square with the boy by giving him a $20 gold piece. There was nothing to be gained by the publication of the facts.

Dana, of the New York Sun, says he is not ashamed to print anything that God allows to happen. If the newspapers of Toledo printed everything that comes within their ken there would be blood on the moon every night in the week. There is not a day that the newspaper offices are not visited by citizens interested in having this or that article suppressed. the friends of a certain justice of the peace are just now trying to suppress an amusing little story on the 'squire. A farmer out in Oregon township had some buckwheat which was being destroyed by a neighbor's bees. The farmer presented his grievance to Mr. J. P. and the legal light asked time to consider the case. A few days later the farmer returned for an answer.

"Well," said his honor, "I have considered your case in all its bearings (hic) and I've come to the conclusion that nothing remains for you (hic) to do (hic) but to shoot the (hic) darn bees."

OBSCURE MARTYRS.

They have no place in storied page,
No rest in marble shrine;
They are passed and gone with a perished age,
They died and made no sign.
But work that shall find its wages yet,
And deeds that their God did not forget,
Done for their love divine—
These were the mourners, and these shall be
The crowns of their immortality.

Oh, seek them not where sleep the dead,
Ye shall not find their trace;
No graven stone is at their head,
No green grass hides their face;
But sad and unseen is the silent grave—
It may be the sand or deep sea wave,
Or a lonely desert place;
For they needed no prayers and no mourning bell—
They were tombed in true hearts that knew them well.

They healed sick hearts till theirs were broken,
And dried sad eyes till theirs lost sight;
We shall know at last by a certain token
How they fought and fell in the fight.
Salt tears of sorrow unbeheld,
Passionate cries unchronicled,
And silent strifes for the right—
Angels shall court them and death shall sigh
That she left her best children to battle and die.

THE SPRINTING RACE ON.

Sherman Will Make Foraker Hustle.

The Sage of Mansfield is in the Fight to Stay.

Captain Donaldson Says the Erratic Statesman from Cincinnati Will Be Downed with Ease and Dispatch.

Columbus, Nov. 6.—The Foraker-Sherman senatorial fight opened with a rush as soon as it was known that the legislature was comfortably republican in both branches.

The partisans of Foraker have been making the most noise. They held a meeting at the office of Charley Kurtz, Foraker's private secretary, and resolved to start in with a hurrah and claim everything in advance. On the basis of the election of 19 republican senators out of 31 and 68 representatives out of 107 the republicans would have 87 members, or a majority of 36 on the joint ballot.

Of these 87 members who will meet in caucus in January the Forakerites claim 50, or a plurality of 13. They refuse to specify names, but they confidently assert that Foraker will have them just the same.

To add to the Foraker enthusiasm the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette in an extra pronounced for Foraker and later on in the day the staid old Evening Dispatch of this city flew the Foraker banner from the masthead and in an editorial said that Sherman was "not in it," unless his disgruntled followers should form a coalition with the democrats.

Foraker's followers acted as if the caucus was to be held in half an hour and that the fight was already won.

Senator Sherman's friends, Capt. Donaldson, Joe Smith, Dave Lanning, and others, laugh at the claim of Foraker's friends and say that they are flopping around like so many chickens with their heads off. They, too, however, held a consultation at which it was decided that although Sherman was safe, prompt steps should be taken to head off the attempted stampede to Foraker.

John Sherman is a sly old fox. He has been in politics a good many years and when it comes to real smooth political work it is doubtful if there is a republican politician in the state to whom he could not give cards and spades and still beat him.

He doesn't make a canvass with a brass band, but he has his agents slipping around over the state with gum shoes on sounding the candidates for the legislature and helping them out in the close counties with money.

No matter what the senator's reputation may be for frugality he is not stingy where his own interests are at stake.

His friends, therefore, believe that his election is already assured. They figure that he will have at least fifty-four members of the caucus, placing the maximum number of Foraker's followers at thirty-three, and they give names. The solid Hamilton county delegation of 13 they give to Foraker, also Senator Rawlings of New Morefield, Representative Hays of Pike, Kessinger of Athens, McGrew of Clarke, Poyer of Erie, Eakins of Gallia, Hughey of Highland, Llewellyn of Jackson, McConnell of Lawrence, Griffin of Lucas, Wanzer of Logan, Kennedy of Montgomery (election doubtful), Boxwell of Warren and James of Wood and perhaps four members of the Cuyahoga delegation. Even some of these they believe to be doubtful.

Senator Sherman's friends say that Foraker is making a prodigious bluff. They do not blame him so much, but they say that he has been deceived by Cappeller, Eli West, Tom Batou, Charley Kurtz and other of his "fool" friends, who started out by telling him that he would be elected senator if the legislature went republican and who are now trying to make their pledges good.

For them and for Foraker they say it will be a life and death struggle, but that six out of seven republicans in the state are against him and he will be overwhelmingly beaten.

This is good warrant for the belief that Foraker has been making overtures to McKinley with a view to a deal, but the wily major has been holding him at arm's length. Foster and Sherman understand each other and they intend in this fight to stamp out forever what political life remains in Gov. Foraker.

It is altogether probable that McKinley will join this coalition. The only thing to deter him would be the fact that he considers himself a presidential quantity and looking at it strictly from the standpoint of number one, he might not be disposed to join forces with Foster, whose main interest in Ohio just now is to secure a Harrison delegation to the next national convention.

As Foraker will undoubtedly try to array the Blaine sentiment of the state on his side in the senatorial contest it might be to McKinley's advantage to let the administration and anti-administration factions cut each other's throats and then crowd in between them and carry off the prize.

No matter how it turns out, Foraker will undoubtedly make long John show his qualities as a sprinter, and the race will be perhaps the most interesting and memorable in the history of the state.

AGAINST THE TIMBER RAFTS

Strong Action Taken by the New York Board.

A Resolution Passed Asking Congress to Repeal the Silver Coinage Act.

New York, Nov. 6.—At a meeting of the chamber of commerce this afternoon a report was adopted from the committee on harbor and shipping, on the subject of peril produced to shipping on the high seas by large rafts of timber, and it was recommended that the secretary of state invite co-operation with other nations in legislation denying clearance or entry to any barge, raft or other structure which does not carry or is not able to maintain distinctive lights or signals.

Mr. J. Edward Simmons offered the following resolution, which after a sharp debate was adopted:

"Whereas a sound currency has been for more than a century a question of supreme solicitude with the chamber; and,

"Whereas at the last monthly meeting a resolution was adopted calling for the repeal of the compulsory purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver monthly,

"Resolved, that a committee of five be appointed to urge on congress said appeal and the suspension of additional coinage of silver until an agreement is reached between the United States and other nations in regard to silver.

"Resolved, That other commercial bodies be urged to co-operate and that the attention of the president of the United States be called to these resolutions and that he be requested in view of his late utterances relative to a sound monetary system, to call the attention of congress to the subject in his forthcoming message."

The resolutions were adopted by a vote of 21 to 12 and the committee was appointed, consisting of President Smith of the chamber, Hon. A. S. Hewitt, Carl Schuz, George A. Coe and John Sloan.

SHOT BY A POLICEMAN.

Strange Actions by an Officer of the Law.

Washington, Nov. 6.—James M. Miller, a one-armed department clerk, is lying at the point of death at Garfield hospital from a pistol wound at the hands of Policeman Burns.

Last night Burns was met by a number of ladies who are attending a women's meeting here and asked the way to their hotel.

He escorted them to a military armory instead and left them. When the ladies, after making inquiries, reached the hotel they found Burns standing in the doorway brandishing a revolver and defying them to approach.

Mr. Miller passed just then and Burns fired at him, the bullet entering his neck. It took several policemen to overpower Burns, who attempted to use his pistol. Burns was locked up. He talks and acts like a crazy man.

SALT MEATS IN FRANCE.

Paris, Nov. 6.—The customs committee of the chamber of deputies will on Saturday next report favorably to the chamber on the proposition to impose a duty of 25 francs for 200 pounds upon the importation into France of American salt meats. This is the amount of duty already determined upon by the senate.

MR. LACEY TALKS AGAIN.

The Maverick Bank Failure Needs Explaining.

The Government Knew of Its Condition for Months.

Why Is It that Certain Favored Banks Can Violate the Law and Continue to Do Business Without Fear of Punishment?

Washington, Nov. 6.—Mr. Lacey is besieged with inquiries concerning the charges and counter charges over the big Maverick bank failure in Boston. He is reluctant to talk, but in view of the charge that the bank examiner, McGruder, reported the bank insolvent last January and urged that it be closed up, Mr. Lacey to-day said: "In January last Bank Examiner McGruder reported to me that the directors of the Maverick National bank were indorsing, in his judgment, too much of the paper discounted by that bank. There is no law to prevent this. One director can indorse all the paper of his bank if he wants to, but it is, of course, unwise and unsafe, and I immediately wrote the bank admonishing it not to do so any more."

"Did Examiner McGruder in that report say he was not satisfied with the securities held by the bank, and did you reply that you would be responsible for the bank?"

"No, sir. He made no such statement, in that or any other report, and I, of course, made no such reply. On the contrary, I not only admonished the bank, but in August I ordered a special examination of its condition, although Bank Examiner McGruger reported that it was improving and apparently thought the examination could just as well be deferred until the regular time came around in January next.

"As a result of the 30 days' examination which he then made, Bank Examiner McGruder reported about the middle of September that the directors were on too much paper and, I believe, that there was a small excess of loans above the statutory limits, a thing which is apt to happen, especially in New York and Boston, with banks having small capital and large business."

But neither in that report or in the January report did McGruder report that there were any losses, or even probable losses, which would impair the capital, or any act or fact indicating prospective insolvency. Apparently the paper which the bank had discounted was all good and apparently the securities were satisfactory.

"Nevertheless I wrote President Potter again and he came here and spent half a day in my office, going over the details of the business with me, and promised in thirty days from that time, which was about Sept. 20, to have it all straightened out.

"All this time I had heard nothing else unfavorable about the bank. In fact the bank examiner reported in September, as he had all along, that it was improving. I had ordered the special semi-annual examination in August, not because I had any new information or any special reason, but out of abundant caution.

"After President Potter left, promising to set right the only wrong thing reported, I heard nothing more that was unfavorable until after the suicide of Evans, when I learned that the Winthrop National bank had declined to accept the certified checks of the Maverick National bank, and that the latter was regarded as in danger.

"From that day I have had the examiner watching for the first act of insolvency which would justify the closing of the bank, and have been in constant consultation with the clearing house committee, whose local knowledge was far more extensive and accurate than mine and who were probably better judges of the bank's local discounts, securities, etc. I am an administrative, not a judicial or legislative officer. I can only do what the national bank act says I can do, no more; and this is just what I have done in this case.

"If I had closed the bank against the advice of the clearing house committee, which as late as Friday last sent word to me that it ought not to be closed, I would have been criticised more severely than I am now. I have done in this case, as in every other, just what I thought was right, and shall not be disturbed by unjust criticism."

HEALTHY. HAPPY. WHY?

Is he a bright child? Does he look healthy and happy? He is bright, and he is both healthy and happy. He is the little son of Mrs. Henry T. Bowers, wife of the well-known contractor and builder, who resides in Dorchester avenue, South Boston. Mrs. Bowers has had quite an experience with her children, which experience we give in her own words, as follows:
"I have a little boy two and one-half years of age, the perfect picture of rugged health, and also a little girl of four. I attribute their good health and good temper to the use of Dr. Hand's Remedies.
I have used, as occasion required, the entire line, and have had very marked results from the Colic Cure, Cough and Croup Medicine, and the Pleasant Physic. I have never had any but good result from the use of any of them."
No mother would make a statement like the above unless she knew wholly whereof she affirmed.

Mr. and Mrs. Norval B. Bacon, of this city, are entertaining Mrs. Bacon's sister, Mrs. Anna Cleveland Hastings. Mrs. Hastings has lately returned from India, where for nearly forty years she has been engaged in missionary work on the island of Ceylon. In 1853, at the age of 22 years, she became the wife of Rev. D. P. Hastings and sailed with him for the distant field of labor, where they were to engage in the noble work to which their lives were devoted.

Seventeen years ago Dr. Hastings was instrumental in founding the college at Ceylon for native young men, under the auspices of the American Board of Missions, and he was connected with the college from its institution until his death, July 31, 1890, at which time he was principal of the college.

In all these years and in all his work Mrs. Hastings was his faithful helpmeet, devoting herself also to that phase of work which women only can perform for women in India. Six children were born to them. Of these the eldest is Rev. Richard Cleveland Hastings (named for his maternal grandfather), who has been for twelve years engaged in missionary work in Ceylon, for the last five or six years a professor in the Ceylon college. He is now on a visit to this country, but will return to Ceylon. One daughter has also been engaged in missionary work, who has now returned to this country, and will make the home of her married life here. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Hastings live in the United States, and Mrs. Hastings will now remain here, having set up housekeeping with a daughter in Hartford, Ct.

It is quite unnecessary to say to Bee readers that Mrs. Bacon's sister is also the sister of our own Grover Cleveland, but it was this fact which led a Bee to call upon Mrs. Hastings this morning. The family resemblance of the brother and sisters is noticeable, but the marked likeness to our ex and future president was found in an oil painting resting upon an easel in Mrs. Bacon's parlor. This is Grover Cleveland's mother's likeness, and one has only to look at it to know that he could be not less than the man he is. "Like mother, like son," should be the amended proverb, for a noble mother stamps her character upon her sons.

The picture was taken when Mrs. Cleveland was 70 years old, but one has to be told that, the sweet face looks so many years younger. There is not a thread of silver in the brown hair that is drawn down smoothly on each side the face, and upon which rests the dainty white lace cap which framed so beautifully the faces of all ladies of advanced age in days which we still remember. This lovely fashion Mrs. Hastings still observes, and as it has again become the mode for English ladies we may hope to see it again adopted here.

"Our mother's picture is a very faithful portrait," said Mrs. Hastings. "She was tall and queenly, and there was always something commanding about her presence even in her daily intercourse with her children. She mingled grace and dignity in every movement." This is markedly the expression of the portrait, for the sparkling face wins by its sweetness, yet has a look of reserve and command.

"Yes," said Mrs. Hastings, "I spent some weeks this summer with my brother and his young wife at Buzzard's bay, their summer home. I have nothing to say about his views upon present political conditions or the future."

"You know, I suppose," said the Bee, "that nothing but his own most positive refusal will prevent his being again the people's candidate for president next year, and, we believe, the people's president in 1893?"

"As to that I can only say that for his own sake, because I believe his faithful work would shorten his life, I would rather he would not take the nomination. What he would do of course I do not know, and could not say. Our visit was the visit of brother and sister who have long been separated. Since I went to India in 1853 I have been in this country only twice before, for brief visits. The last time I was here my brother had just been elected mayor of Buffalo, and I never met 'Governor Cleveland' nor 'President Cleveland.'

"But you will meet President Cleveland yet, now that you have come back to stay?" To this Mrs. Hastings replied only with a smile.

"Have you seen the baby?" was naturally the next question.

"No, I have not visited my brother in New York, but of course I was apprised of the happy event a few hours in advance of the newspapers. The name delights me. 'Ruth' is so sweet and old-fashioned. It was Mrs. Folsom's mother's name, but we all like it."

Mrs. Hastings is the oldest of a family of nine children, and seven years older than her distinguished brother, who was but a boy when she went away in 1853. She will remain the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Bacon some weeks.

BLEW OUT THE GAS.

A Case that May be Suicide or Carelessness.

Thomas O'Fallon Found Nearly Asphyxiated in a Room at Volk's Boarding House.

Another death from asphyxiation by leaving the gas on is likely to be recorded for this city. The victim this time is Thomas O'Fallon, who lodged at Volk's restaurant and boarding house on Summit street last night and was found in a dying condition this morning.

O'Fallon has a brother James living at 383 Forrer street, who manufactures a liniment that Thomas was selling. The unfortunate man has been lodging at Volk's for about two weeks and went to his room as usual about 8 o'clock last night. As he did not get up this morning Mr. Adam Volk set about investigating the matter at 11 o'clock. He could not get the door open, but taking a step-ladder opened the transom and found the room full of gas. It was but the work of a moment to get inside, open the door and turn off the gas. He then found O'Fallon on the bed apparently dead. Physicians were called and they found the man still alive, but expressed no hope for his recovery. This afternoon he was taken to the home of his brother in the ambulance.

O'Fallon is about 50 years of age, and it is thought that he intended to commit suicide, but for what reason is not known. The suicide theory is substantiated by the fact that the transom of the room was closed when it is usually left open. The only effects that the man had in the room was a small satchel containing a few articles and several bottles of medicine.

MR. BOYLE PLEADS GUILTY

To Criminal Libel and is Fined $200 and Costs.

As was predicted in last evening's Bee, the Boyle libel case has been settled.

The grand jury of the April term indicted P. C. Boyle and Negley D. Cochran on the charge of criminal libel, of the particulars of which the public is well informed.

The case came to trial and the jury returned a verdict acquiting Mr. Cochran and found Mr. Boyle guilty as charged. The court accordingly passed sentence, fixing a fine of $200 and costs and imposing in addition 10 days in the county jail.

The defense was granted a stay of execution and the case was appealed to the circuit court in error. Here it was tried, and during the term recently adjourned a decision was rendered reversing the action of the lower court setting the verdict aside and remanding the case back for new trial.

The case was set for hearing in criminal court to-day.

Last evening about 5 o'clock Mr. Boyle appeared before Judge Harmon and pleaded guilty, and was fined $200 and costs. The fine and costs, amounting to $411, was paid and the case is settled.

A CROOK CAUGHT.

A man giving his name as Theodore White was arraigned in police court this morning on charges of being a suspicious person and carrying concealed weapons. White is very evidently a crook, for he had with him an assortment of twelve fine new silk handkerchiefs, a new merschaum pipe, several pocketbooks of different descriptions, a chisel, a screw driver and a revolver. He had evidently burglarized a country store somewhere and could give no reasonable account of himself. To Officer Van Buskirk, who arrested him, he said he lived in New York, and to Detective Snore he claimed to had from New York. He was fined $15 and costs and 10 days. In the meantime an effort will be made to find out where the goods come from that he had on his person.

All attempts to recover the lost property were unavailing.

SIMON MAPLE DEAD.

Lima, O., Nov. 6.—Simon Maple, the owner of the Exchange bank at Columbus Grove, died yesterday after an illness of only a short time.

The Exchange bank is the institution which was robbed by the second Jesse James, and in which Farmer Vandemark was killed and Cashier T. J. Maple wounded. The cashier is a son of the deceased, who was well advanced in years, and the shock of his son's being wounded and the excitement attendant to the affair greatly hastened his death.

THE COLONEL'S DINNER.

A Confederate soldier of Gen. Bragg's army has much to say of the state of semi-starvation in which he and his comrades were much of the time kept, says the Youth's Companion.

"While we were at Chattanooga my father paid me a visit. Rations were mighty scarce. I was very glad to see him, but felt ashamed to have him know how badly off we were for something to eat. We were living on parched corn.

"Finally I hit upon a plan for getting him a good dinner. I invited him to go with me to the colonel's tent.

"'Colonel Field,' said I, 'I wish to introduce you to my father, and, as rations are a little short in the mess just now, perhaps you will be good enough to invite him to dine with you.'

"'Certainly,' answered Col. Field; 'I shall be happy to have both of you remain to dinner.'

"I accepted the invitation with many thanks, and just then a young negro came in with a frying-pan of parched corn and dumped it on an old cloth.

"'Master,' said he, 'dinner is ready;' and we all sat down. The colonel, like the private soldiers, had nothing to eat but parched corn."

A WOMAN'S CONFESSION.

I was waiting at the crossing for one of those ox-team street cars, in a city that constantly talks rapid transit—merely talks, you know—and after standing for half an hour (N. B.—This is no exaggeration) in the despondent attitude and mood which always comes over me when I contemplate the possibility of rapid transit for my great grandchildren, I was really not in a sufficiently cheerful condition of temper to be approached. I am afraid I shuddered, and snapped out a too emphatic "No," when she offered me some of her small wares. But what a creature she was! Her hair, from which the old shawl had fallen back, was an iron gray, and I am positive had not known brush or comb for a month of Sundays. Her face wrinkled, seamed, blear-eyed, blowzy and dirty. Her clothing glazed with filth. Her shoulders bent, her hands like eagles' claws, her feet encased in a pair of No. 11 cast-off rubbers. There was a look of surprise in her blear eyes at my visible shudder; but she passed on without a word. When, a moment later, I realized a lost opportunity, she was far down the block lost in the hurrying throng.

But I pity the mortal who ever experienced a keener thrill of self-contempt than I at that moment. "Oh, daughter of Eve," I cried to the skulking woman within me, "to think that you who sit at your desk and write pityingly of the sorrows of God's poor should dare to bestow such treatment upon one of them! You who always claim that a little smile, a little word of kindness, amid the gray clouds of poverty, can do so much to smooth the rugged path and brighten the dul skies of a cold world. You, who because you haven't money to bestow, believe in the greater riches of sympathy, tenderness and kind treatment! I am ashamed of you!" "But," answered the conscious coward, "she wasn't one of God's poor; she was one of Satan's own, I know! God's poor are self-respecting: know the value of soap and water and are not so overcome with evil that every line of the face bespeaks the brute." "And yet you believe that there is a divine spark in every individual which should be cherished and cultivated?" "Certainly!" "Well, Madame Logic, how are you going to do it, if you and everybody else shrink away from them in absolute horror?" "I—I don't know," answered the consistent woman, "unless we cherish it at the end of a pitchfork, as a certain gentleman of the cloven hoof is said to do, and which the world is only too glad to copy."—Birch Arnold in Chicago Herald.

"AM I A MURDERER?"

A Tragedy From the Sea Related by the First Mate.

Among the few narratives which I have written pertaining to a life at sea, describing scenes which have transpired under my own observation, is the following, which I wrote shortly after the sad event of which it speaks took place.

You may think if a very strange and rather startling question, and doubtless will say that no one should know better than myself whether I am a murderer or not. But if I am to be both judge and jury in the case, the verdict is very likely to be in my favor, as my conscience has never worried very much about the matter, nor have I lost much sleep in thinking over it. Yet, possibly, if you knew all the circumstances, you might view my actions in an entirely different light from that in which I do, and not hold me quite as guiltless as I think I am.

However, I'll tell you the whole story, and you can then judge for yourself, only, before coming to a decision, bear in mind the position I held aboard the ship at the time, and what duties are required from the one who fills it.

My story may also shed a ray of light on the mystery why sailors often, seemingly without any reason, are reported as having deserted their ships, and are never seen by those whom they should, and do, hold dear, and also give an idea of how very little the majority of captains and officers of ships, as a rule, care about relieving the long, heart-breaking torture and suspense which many a poor sailor's wife frequently suffers.

In the fall of 1860 I joined the bark ——, hailing from Halifax, N. S., as her chief mate. She was commanded by a smart, well-built, handsome young fellow of 30 or thereabouts, who also owned a considerable share in the ship, which was then lying in the new dock at Cardiff, Wales, waiting for a cargo of coal to carry out to Buenos Ayres, in South America, and, after getting as much of a load on board as was deemed prudent to carry, we hauled down to the basin, there to make ready for sea.

The officers, who are usually engaged some time previous, thus have no chance whatever to find out what kind of men the captain has hired for a crew, but have to make the best of what they get, be they tailors or sailors, as, so long as they are only something in the shape of men, the ship, if once started on the voyage, would not turn back on that account. But in this case the circumstances were a little different.

That day on which we hauled to the basin a strong westerly gale set in and continued to blow steadily for two weeks, and as you know, the coast of England is anything but a pleasure cruising ground, with a dirty, wet, westerly gale of wind blowing right in a ship's teeth, our captain very wisely decided to remain where he was until the blow was over.

This gave me a chance of finding out what stuff our crew was made of, because, after the ship had been in the basin a couple of days, their money being all spent, and each one having run up as large an account as the crimps, who kept the boarding houses where they had been living, would trust them with, they had, of necessity, to come on board and go to work. It took only a very short time for me to size each one up according to his merits, and I was very much pleased to find but one only, among the twelve men the captain had shipped, with whom I could find any great fault. This one, however, was utterly useless. He was, in fact, no sailor at all, having only been one trip to sea, and even then as one of the steward's crew—flunkies we call them—on board some steamer, hardly knowing the stem from the stern of a sailing ship. Certainly he did not know the name of a single rope on board the vessel.

Now what would you have done with such a man had you been chief officer on board that ship?

"Tell him to go ashore."

Just what I did. Every morning as he would make his appearance when the hands were turned out, I would call him aside and tell him I was afraid his health would suffer if he went out to sea. That it was not good for any one to be on board of her who could not do his duty, and that if he consulted his health at all he had better go so that I could get another man in his place. Nay, further, one day, being very much annoyed at his stupidity and his brazen cheek in coming aboard as an able seaman, I called him aft and gave him sound, fatherly advice. If any sailors are among my readers they will understand how impressive the advice was likely to have been and that the man would also fully understand that I was deeply in earnest by the time I had finished the advice which I had given him. But it was all of no use. He was shipped for the voyage, and I could not get him to leave.

Poor fellow! I sometimes pity him when I think of the dilemma he was in at the time, being literally "between the devil and the deep sea" for the crimp, with whom he had been boarding previous to his coming on board, was about the blackest of his kind, and that is saying a good deal, and who would, on no account, allow him to leave the ship; as, if he left, the note which the sailor had received for wages in advance, and which he had advanced for him, would become worthless. Therefore, not daring to leave he went to the "deep sea," and, in but a very little while afterward, to the bottom of it.

About fifteen or twenty days after leaving Cardiff we struck the northeast trade winds and pleasant weather. One fine morning, just after entering them, I had the watch on deck from 4 a. m. until 8 a. m., which is usually devoted to washing decks and cleaning ship, but on this particular morning, after washing decks, I had also several little things which I wanted attended to before 8 o'clock, so as not to interfere with the work which I had laid out for the second mate's watch, and, having sent men to attend to them, I found that I wanted a block brought down from the mizen topmast head, and had no one to send for it but this man. He had never been aloft yet—at least not so high up as this—but as it was a beautiful morning, with a gentle four-knot breeze blowing—just enough to keep the sails full, and the ship gliding along as steady as a church, I thought that, if I ever could make a sailor of him or teach him to go aloft now was the time, so I sent Tom—that was the name I think he went by—up to the masthead, and off he started, though rather slowly. Tom got as far as the mizzentop, but there he stuck, and apparently was not inclined to go any further. To induce him to get up a little higher I encouraged him, to the best of my ability, from the deck. I will admit that my encouraging remarks might not have been altogether proper, and, perhaps, would have seemed to a landsman rather more like a series of threats given in the language usually adopted toward the crew by many captains and officers after ship's moorings are cast adrift from the dock.

Did you ever hear of the predicament the farmer was in one morning, after having attended a revival meeting the night previous, where he had made a resolution to turn over a new leaf, how astonished he was when he could not, after using the most gentle and endearing terms, get his mules in motion. How he patiently labored with them and coaxed them, while they continued like fixtures, until, finally losing his temper and forgetting all his recently-made good resolutions, he broke out with his old—and to his mules—veryfamiliar string of oaths and big cuss words which he was accustomed to pet them with; then how they immediately picked up their ears and started briskly off as if that was the only thing on earth which could have moved them. The farmer said that afterwards he would use one language to Christians and another to mules. I am afraid a great number of those in authority aboard ship say as the farmer said, only using the word sailor instead of mules.

On noticing that Tom was not inclined to go up any higher, and finding my words of no avail, I made a motion as if I was about to come up the rigging and —assist him. Then he started upwards again, and had nearly succeeded in climbing to the mast-head, where he could have had a little rest by throwing his leg over the top-mast stay, but unfortunately the mast had been greased only the day before, and the man who had done the greasing, not being too careful, had got the backstays, up which Tom was climbing, somewhat slippery.

As I have said, he had nearly reached the mast-head—here his hands began to slip, and ere he could regain a firm hold—he fell.

I saw him clutch frantically at the backstays, but, at the speed with which he was now falling, the hard wire ropes must have torn away the flesh from the bones in the palms of his hands; at any rate he did not even break his fall, but came crashing down as if shot from a gun, striking the starboard channels with terrific force and then he fell overboard into the sea before I could spring forward to try and save him. The whole thing occurred almost in the twinkling of an eye, and by the time I reached the rail he had sunk below the surface.

A glance was all I could bestow.

"Man overboard," I reared in a tone loud enough to be heard all over the ship. "Put your helm down," I shouted to the man at the wheel, at the same time throwing over the end of every rope which hung on the belaying pins at my hand, as also a life buoy which hung close by.

Meanwhile, in answer to this terrible cry at sea, the crew had sprung on deck. It took no second call to get them all there—from the captain to the cook. Almost as soon as I can tell it I had the main topsail laid aback. While I was getting this done the second mate with some hands were cutting a boat adrift from its lashings on the top of the for'ard deck house.

"No time now for getting tackles aloft," I shouted, "turn her over boys and launch her from where she lays," and, with a rope fast to her bow, as many hands as could get round the gunwale picked the boat up and threw it overboard as if it had been only a shell. To get the oars and a crew into her was but the work of another moment, and away she went on her merciful errand, the second mate steering in the direction of the life buoy, guided by signs from the captain, who had jumped into the rigging and never lost sight of it for an instant.

But her errand proved fruitless after rowing over and carefully searching the neighborhood for an hour or so, the captain signaled for the boat to come back. Our crew now numbered one less. Poor Tom, with all his faults, was gone. If the boat had lingered there, for the rest of the day, it would have been with no better success, having surely been over the spot where he went down but failed to see anything of him excepting an old Scotch cap, which he had on when he fell, floating on the surface of the ocean, the only thing to mark his grave.

I'll never forget the sweet, peaceful look he had, as I got that momentary glance at him immediately after he fell; the deep, clear sea reflecting back the blue sky above, allowing me to see him, even at that great depth, as if nothing intervened. He was lying there just as if he was stretched out asleep on the deck, half turned on his side, with his face towards me; his cheek resting on his arm, and with a much sweeter, calmer expression on his dead face than, I believe, he had for years when living.

He must have been dead ere he reached the water. No signs of agony, nor of the terrible fright which was pictured on his face when he began to fall, being now visible. His pain was brief and his death sudden, and he rests where many a poor fellow had gone to sleep before him.

"Fill away the main yard—keep her course again—let the hands go to breakfast," were the next orders given by the captain after the boat had been hoisted aboard, and that was the end of poor Tom.

Tom what? Ah! no one knows.

Next day the captain sold his clothes by auction at the capstan and got sixty cents for the benefit of his relatives!

Who and where were they? But that question troubled no one. There are few who have no one to love or to miss them, and in all probability some one is now watching and waiting and wondering at his long, unaccountable absence; or, perhaps, having at last reluctantly given up all hopes of ever seeing him alive, are shedding silent tears over his memory and wondering how their loved one died. They will never know.

The leaf in the log book mentioning his death, which I made at the time, was, on our arrival at our destination, torn out and destroyed by the captain's orders, who then went ashore, and—can you believe it —coolly reported him to the British Consul as a desterter.

Tom's end thus was completely enshrowded in mystery. If anyone ever searched for him they might have traced the ship to Buenos Ayres, where the consul—who was the last to have any record of him—would say: "That man deserted from the ——. You will have to find where he went to when he deserted."

Now, what say you, am I guilty or not guilty?—Tom Tarpot, in New York Sunday News.

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." Diseases common to the race compel the search for a common remedy. It is found in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the reputation of which is world-wide, having largely superseded every other blood medicine in use.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

Two Men Killed Near Hamilton To-Day.

They Stepped Off One Track Directly in Front of a Moving Train and Were Ground to Pieces.

Hamilton, O., Nov. 6.—William Morrill, 35 years old, of Cincinnati, and P. Hart, aged 45, of Anderson, Ind., were instantly killed at Shanks' station on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad this morning.

They were walking along the track and stepped aside to let a southbound train pass and were struck by a train going north on a parallel track. Both men were horribly mangled. The remains were brought to this city. Hart was evidently an electrician, as he had on his person letters and addresses of electrical companies.

Our method of treatment will speedily and permanently cure the most obstinate case, and absolutely restore perfect manhood.

TO MIDDLE-AGED MEN.—There are many from the age of 30 to 60 who are troubled with frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight burning or smarting sensation, weakening the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examination of the urinary deposits, a ropy sediment will be found, or the color will be a thin or milkish hue. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is a second stage of seminal weakness. We will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

Wheat Quotations for the Day—Price Current for Produce and Other Articles.

London wheat market very firm and three pence per quarter higher; corn strong. Country markets strong. Liverpool wheat firm and one penny per 100 pounds higher. Corn firm.

Liverpool received in past six days 978,339 bu wheat, of which 471,660 was American; and 239,000 bu of corn.

The receipts of wheat at seven principal western points to-day are 1,178,823 bu, compared with 606,098 bu on the same day last year.

Chicago lake freights are 4c on wheat and 3 3-4c on corn to Buffalo.

Silver Purchases and Coinage.

Silver was purchased to-day at a lower price than ever before under the present silver law. The total amount offered to the treasury department was 1,205,000 ounces, and of this 468,000 ounces were purchased, 50,000 ounces being taken at $0.95, 318,000 ounces at $0.9575, and 100,000 ounces at $0.958. This makes the value of the silver in a silver dollar less than 74c. The total coinage executed at the mints during October was 12,019,900 pieces, of the value of $3,949,100, of which the gold coinage was $1,980,000, the silver coinage $1,825,000 and the minor coinage $144,100.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

The receipts of wheat to-day at seven principal western points are 441,200 bus. in excess of the corresponding Friday in 1890.

The export clearances yesterday at four Atlantic ports were 238,277 bus. and flour to an aggregate of 440,000 bus. The exports of corn were 110,464 bus. and of oats 74,086 bus.

The English markets as reported herein are strong and higher on wheat and firm on corn.

The value of Wheat.

The Liverpool outside quotations for red winter wheat, this morning, is 8s 6 1-2d, which equals $1.23 per bu. This quotation is based on New York standard of quality. Western No. 2 winter wheat is worth a premium in New York of 2c to 3c per bu., but on the basis of the New York wheat at $1.23 and a water freight of 19c, there is left $1.04 for the wheat in Toledo, and sufficient margin for all extra expenses. Wheat looks low enough on this basis.

German Duties.

A special to the New York Herald from Washington, states that the details of the German and American treaty have been completed, and that the import duties on grain will be reduced to about one-half of present rate, which on wheat is about 33c per bu.

Bradstreet's report of the visible supply makes wheat this side of the Rockies increased 3,762,000 bu, corn increased 447,000 bu, oats decreased 77,000 bu. On the Pacific coast wheat decreased 468,000 bu. Net increase in wheat 3,294,000 bu. This is a sharp commentary on the enormous wheat movement, which exceeds any in our history.

The Sales for Export.

New York reports 75 loads of wheat, 600,000 bu, sold there yesterday for export. These sales are divided over future months, and may not all be shipped, but no one ever saw so great an export demand before.

We made a bad break yesterday in multiplying the export for 79 days, as giving a daily shipment of 4,000,000 bu, instead of 400,000 bu.

Markets To-day.

The weather here is sunny and beautiful and indicates the advent of Indian summer. But there is no rain here or elsewhere, of any possible good, in all the winter wheat section. This fact together with the strong tone and advance in English markets and the immense sales for export have materially advanced the price of wheat in the markets of this country.

Closing Liverpool wheat 1-2 higher. London 3 1-2 pence up. Antwerp 1 1-2c higher.

In New York November wheat closed corn 1 1-2 and December 2 3-8 higher. November corn 1-4 and December corn 1-4 higher. November oats 1-8 lower.

In Chicago December wheat closed 2 1-2c up; November corn, 3-8c, and November oats 1-2c up.

In Toledo—The trading in wheat futures has been more active and at improved prices. The market has been strong, and steadily advancing all day. December wheat opened 1-2c and closed 2 1-2c higher. THEN THERE WAS ROOM.

They stood on the corner and watched several street cars go by, each one filled to its utmost capacity.

Then there was an altercation. No one seemed to know just what the trouble was, but as a well filled car approached they were disputing and gesticulating in a most excited manner. Of course some one on the car saw them and exclaimed:

"There's a fight, sure!"

There was a scramble to get a look at the disputants, and various comments from various people.

"Both drunk!" said one.

"I'll bet the little man can do him!" said another.

"Say! but it'll be a beauty!" added a third.

The car was just passing as they grappled and went down together, and half a minute later there were only two men left on the rear platform and 12 seats inside were vacant.

Then as the crowd reached the spot two men got on their feet and one cried:

"Run for it!"

And the other replied:

"It never fails!"

Fifteen or 20 men trailed after the fleeing fighters. And they were sore! Nor were their tempers improved as they saw the two young men in the best seats in the car, and heard one of them say:

"It's a trifle rough, but it pays."

MANTCHOOS AND CHINESE AT DINNER.

Yet when the Mantchoos invite Chinese they think it complimentary to provide Chinese dishes, in which they are not strong. And, in like manner, when Chinese invite Mantchoos, they feel it incumbent upon them to provide Mantchoo dishes, in which they by no means excel. Each party sets out to paint a tiger, but the result reminds one only of a dog.

Don't eat with your ears; by which I mean do not aim at having extraordinary out-of-the-way foods, just to astonish your guests. For that is to eat with your ears, not with the mouth. Beancurd, if good, is actually nicer than birds' nest. And better than sea slugs, which are not first rate, is a dish of bamboo shoots.

The chicken, the pig, the fish and the duck, these are the four heroes of the table. Sea slugs and birds' nests have no characteristic flavors of their own. They are but the usurpers in the house. I once dined with a friend who gave us birds' nest in bowls more like vats, holding each about four ounces of the plain boiled article. The other guests applauded vigorously; but I smiled and said, I came here to eat birds' nest, not to take delivery of it wholesale.—Yuan Mei, 1716.

A BEE GRAFTS AN APPLE.

The Chambersburg (Pa.) correspondent of the Philadelphia Record says: Horticulturists who have seen it say that an apple which was picked the other day in E. B. George's orchard, New Franklin, could only have been produced by a peculiar grafting done by the bees in the apple blossom season. Exactly one-half of the apple is golden russet, like the apples that grew on the same tree, and the other half is bright green pippin, such a variety as grew on trees 100 yards distant. In blossoming time a bee must have transplanted a part of a distant pippin's blossom into the petals of the russet's flower. Dr. A. B. Grove has preserved this unique fruit in alcohol.

AN OLD VETERAN SPEAKS

The War Being Over, Other Enemies Await Him.

Chronic Catarrh, the Worst of Foes, is Met, Fought and Conquered.

Dr. S. B. Hartman—Dear Sir: I have been afflicted with catarrh of the head, nose and throat for twelve years. A slight change in the weather would give me a fresh cold, producing abundant discharges from my eyes and nose, also continued sneezing. I had ulcers at the root of my tongue and in my throat. I tried several catarrh remedies, with only temporary relief. I commenced taking Pe-ru-na as directed on the bottle, and improved at once, and continued to improve as I continued to use Pe-ru-na. I am a broken down veteran soldier, 57 years old, and I heartily recommend Pe-ru-na to all catarrh sufferers.

ANDREW WALKER, Selma, Ia.

Why Some Patients Find No Cure.

The reason that so many patients fail in finding a cure for chronic catarrh is because of their unwillingness to continue treatment long enough. Many people who have had chronic catarrh for five, ten, and even fifteen years, will follow treatment for a few weeks, and then, because they are not cured, give up in despair and try something else. These patients never follow any one treatment long enough to test its merits, and consequently never find a cure. It is a well-known law of disease that the longer it has run the more tenaciously it becomes fastened to its victim.

Palliatives Do Not Cure.

The difficulty with which catarrh is cured has led to the invention of a host of remedies which produce temporary relief only. The unthinking masses expect to find some remedy which will cure them in a few days and to take advantage of this false hope many compounds which have instant but transient effect have been devised. The people try these catarrh cures one after another, but disappointment is the invariable result, until very many sincerely believe that no cure is possible.

Local Application Can Not Cure.

The various kinds and modes of local applications, such as sprays, atomizers, douches, inhalants, fumigations, creams, ointments, lotions, gargles, etc., etc., have in many cases a soothing effect on the inflamed surfaces, and are sometimes useful to assist nature; but neither of them, nor all of them together, ever did or ever will cure a case of catarrh. These things may give temporary relief, but it is useless to expect a cure of them. Catarrh is not a local disease, hence cannot be cured by local treatment.

The Only Hope of Success

in the permanent cure of a case of chronic catarrh is to devise some remedy that will remove the cause. I know of but one remedy that has this most desirable effect, and that remedy is Pe-ru-na. This remedy strikes at once at the root of the catarrh by resforing to the mucous membranes their healthy elasticity. Pe-ru-na is not a temporary palliative, but a radical cure. Its action is necessarily slow, but permanent.

Catarrh Is Curable.

In the majority of cases (especially those of less than two years' duration) catarrh can be cured in a few weeks by the proper use of Pe-ru-na. Some cases are cured by six bottles, others by four, and we have not a few testimonials who have professed a cure from even one bottle of this remedy. Where a case of catarrh has existed for five or ten years a permanent cure cannot be reasonably hoped for in less than three or four months, and in some rare cases the continued use of Pe-ru-na for one year has been necessary to effect a permanent cure. But, unless the case is very old and complicated, a speedy and permanent cure is sure.

A Cure Guaranteed.

To all those who conscientiously follow the above treatment for a reasonable length of time a cure is guaranteed. There need be no failures. Each bottle of Pe-ru-na is accompanied with complete directions for use. The remedy can be had of any wholesale druggist in the United States, and most retail druggists.

BALLOT-BOX STUFFERS.

How the California Vigilance Committee of 1856 Dealt With Them.

Wm. T. Coleman, chairman of the Vigilance Committees of 1851, '56 and '77, writes as follows on this topic in the Century for November: "The next important work was the action to be taken with regard to notorious ballot-box stuffers and other desperate characters. They were a curse to the country. Every one admitted it, but no effective action had been taken against them. In many cases they held the polls at election and attacked, maimed and terrified those voters who were opposed to their friends. If arrested, such was the dread they had inspired, and so great their influence with the courts, that conviction was almost impossible. This immunity from punishment increased their insolence and violence, and it was evident that no reform could be made while they remained in the state. What was to be done with them? They could not be hanged; they would be a source of expense and trouble; safe and satisfactory imprisonment was plainly impracticable. It was therefore suggested that if, after fair trial, the charges against them were proved, no course would be so satisfactory and safe as banishment, with a warning never again to return under pain of death. This was adopted, and a blacklist was made of all these notorious characters. Evidence was collected, and orders were soon given for the arrest of these men wherever they could be found in the state. They were tried, convicted, sentenced, and deported, many of them as first-class passengers, by sailing ships and steamships, at the sole expense of the committee, and in a style far above their deserts; this was not appreciated, but flattered and exalted them to the belief that they were important personages and had suffered great damages, and they brought suits against the committee. Singularly, or perhaps naturally, these suits were only brought by those who were best treated. Those who were shipped in the steerage never brought suits and were never afterward troublesome."

NO CITIZENSHIP FOR CHINAMEN.

Judge Acheson, of the United States circuit court has refused to admit into citizenship Jung Ah Wah, a Chinaman residing at No. 2103 North Eighth street. The act of 1882 denying citizenship to Chinamen is to be repealed on the ratification of the pending treaty; but even if this has happened, which the judge is trying to ascertain, the constitution denies naturalization to all but "free white men" and Africans.—Philadelphia Record.

THE GIRLS OF MAINE.

A young woman who lives in Holden reports an exciting encounter with a wildcat in a lonely field. On last Saturday evening there was a paring bee at a house on Mann's hill, and the young lady started to cross lots from her home to the bee. As she was crossing the field she saw a young wildcat, and seizing a club attacked and killed the beast. She was a good deal startled and out of breath when she arrived at her destination, but managed to tell her story and enjoy the bee very much after she had finished it.—Lewiston Journal.

BACCILLI IN BLOOD.

Recent experiments as read before the last Congress of Surgeons at Berlin, leave no doubt that the true way to CLEAR THE SYSTEM OF MICROBI is through the pores of the skin. It has been found that a remedy which kills the Microbi will also destroy the life of the patient; but it has also been found that the Microbi can be forced out through the skin, and it is in this way that S.S.S. relieves the system of poison.

HAVING SUFFERED much from Contagious Blood Poison, after using half a dozen bottles of S.S.S. I was RESTORED TO PERFECT HEALTH, and all eruptive sores disappeared. You are at liberty to make any use of my statement that you wish.—J. CROSBY BYRON, 208 Third Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa.

AMERICAN WOMEN IN ENGLAND.

Ah! the fine doings of our country men and women abroad this summer, and particularly in England.

It positively takes one's breath away to hear them quote line upon line of Burke and DeBrett in such glib and easy way that none but a fool would suppose that in all their experience they ever condescended to talk with any one beneath the rank of a duchess.

All this talk sounds fine, says the New York Herald. No wonder this boasting of social distiction and successes gained abroad inspires every woman who listens to go and do likewise. But alas! only the glittering side is shown up. The petty crawling, creeping methods employed to get into "smart" English society are never touched on. Listen to this pretty tale of woe confided to me by one of our cleverest women, who had an unbounded success in London, but is now anxious to confide to her envious countrywomen just what it cost her.

She told me almost precisely as follows:

"This getting on in London or English society is really a commercial transaction, and it is always no pay, no get there. The American forunes are always welcome. No matter how they are made, if in pork or lard, patent medicine, stock jobbing, or bank wrecking, what is it to them, so long as they get a good share of the pile?"

"Here are some of the rules for getting on in London. First, be sure of a big bank account, and then take a house. Of course one or two letters of introduction are useful, but by all means take one to some impecunious lady of title, who tokes such an interest in 'you funny Americans.'

"My 'friend' could not be bribed. She was above accepting filhy lucre, but then she had a house to let, and if I would take it for a season she'd let it go at the modest sum of 3,000 guineas, and promised not only to include her own card with any invitations I might send out, but she would even stand near me when I was receiving her friends, so that she might give a wink or a nod to let people know who this strange woman, meaning I, really was.

"Then the dear aristrocrat will tell you that it is an impossibility for her to pass Hancock's, in Bond street, for, says she, 'it does make my heart ache to see those lovely diamonds.' If you are a tender-hearted woman, as I am, a diamond necklace will blaze upon the peeress' neck at your next reception.

"Next your cicerone, your fairy go mother, tells you that you must have a house-boat at Henley. 'Oh, I'll fill it for you, never fear.' I jumped at the idea. Henley, of all places; such a lovely spot, the boats, the pretty costumes, the gay house-parties, and perhaps the prince may stray out that way, and he is such a devoted friend of my social guide. So your aristocratic chaperon sets to work, gets the largest and most expensive house-boat at Henley. Then she begins to stock it with the finest wines, fruit from Solomon's that costs its weight in five pound notes, game the choicest, and everything the heart can desire. You must say nothing, for it's getting into society to do all this. She, with great consideration will hand you the list of guests she has invited for the house-boat party. You look it over, of course, out of mere curiosity, when, horrors! you find that not only is her husband not expected, but yours is also left out. No names in the whole party match. It is Mr. Somebody with Mrs. Somebody Else, or Lord Black with Lady White. If you object that you must have at least one pair of names to match, the woman demurs, and finally consents to scratch out two names and to invite in their place Mr. and Mrs. Poppleton, 'very discreet people.'

"So you pay the bills and have the mortification of seeing high old jinks going on in which you are not expected to join, even if you wanted to.

"But what, after all, is Henley?" queried this excited woman, "to a visit from royalty? Even this great distinction can be arranged. Of course it comes higher. It will take a bigger house, more diamond necklaces, and then the prince will not condescend to let you run your own show. No, indeed, he looks over the list, scratches out a name here, adds one there, no doubt your worst enemy, and then says with a royal sweep of the hand, 'Let the meal proceed.' You get on your best bib and tucker and stand waiting for his Royal Nibs to take you down to dinner. Not a bit of it, you may have to sit at another table, but then the next day you will read in the Morning Post, the Times, and all the society journals that the prince has been your guest, then the cable will spread it to all parts of the world and your friends will say: 'Marvelous! What success!'

"Why one of the royal duchesses the other day celebrated her silver wedding, and when the gifts were being displayed an intimate friend of the family called in to inspect the treasures. His eye fell upon a magnificent set of plate, gold and silver combined, such a thing as is generally given by a corporation, but, dear me, the donor was equal to several corporations in point of wealth. The friend was bold, and he said to her royal highness, 'Aha! I did not know you knew her.'

"'Oh, yes!'

"'The next thing we shall hear is that you are dining there.'

"'We dine there next week.'

"'Why didn't you put them off longer, that the deuceur might have been so much the bigger?'"

All this will make amusing but rather bitter reading for the thousand of American women who have cast the eye of envy upon social recognition and prominence in England.

DISASTROUS FAILURE.

It is with feelings of regret that we announce the failure of hosts of people troubled with inaction of the kidneys to take efficient means to renew their activity. This failure is most disastrous, for a complete wreck of the organs themselves must eventuate if timely means are not taken to re-establish their secretive function on a basis of activity and regularity. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters renews both, and prevents ultimate and fatal disaster. As it is one of the functions of the kidneys to strain from the blood, in its passage through them, impurities procreative of dropsy, rheumatism and gout, an early impetus is all the more needful to be given to their operations when tardy or ineffectual. The unmedicated stimuli of commerce do not answer this purpose. Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, malaria, constipation and billiousness.

HEALTH SUGGESTIONS.

Plenty of light is as essential to good health as pure air.

Eat meals of good, plain food regularly. Mutton is the most digestible meat.

In wet weather wear stout water-proof boots in preference to rubber overshoes.

Dr. R. W. Richardson says that he has never known a death from bronchitis or pneumonia that did not spring from a cold. It follows then that a cold is a more dangerous malady than is usually thought; so be careful of yourself.

By far the best method of getting rid of a cold and consequent depression is to take a little pure whiskey in water. Such a stimulant promotes the circulation which has been checked and removes the effect of the chill.

Great care should be exercised in buying whiskey. The presence of fusil oil or other impurities is a source of danger to those who imbibe it.

The only whiskey that is manufactured for purely medicinal purposes is Duffy's Pure Malt and may be obtained from druggists and grocers. There is no other whiskey so free from fusil oil or so pure and beneficial. The leading scientists say so.

INVALIDS SHOULD REMEMBER THE DATE.

We wish again to call the attention of our readers to the return visit of Drs. France & Ottman, as announced by their large advertisement in this issue of our paper. The cry of beware of the fraudulent traveling "quack," which very justly gained prominence a few years ago when the laws of our state permitted this species of gentry to ply their vocation, has outlived its application. The recognized fact that it is beyond the ken of possibilities for any one man to master all the branches of the healing art, has caused the best men in the profession, both in Europe and America, to devote their entire energies to perfecting themselves in special branches.

Drs. France & Ottman, who present their credentials from the best medical institutions in the country, have spent the past ten years in the constant investigation and treatment of chronic diseases. The fact that they refuse to prescribe for any disease outside of their specialties and ask only those to visit them who have failed to get relief from their family physicians, entitles them to confidence. Large numbers already throng their parlors at each visit. Every invalid should carefully read their mammoth advertisement and visit them at their parlors.

Drs. France & Ottman, Formerly of New York, now of the France Medical and Surgical Institute, Columbus, Ohio, by request of many friends and patients, have decided to visit Toledo, Saturday, Nov. 7. Consultation and examination free and strictly confidential in the private parlor of the Burnett House, from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m., one day only.

MONEY BURNED IN STOVES.

Kitchen stoves burn up more cash every year than is lost in any other way. People will confide their hoards to them for hiding, and when they are lighted the greenbacks go up in smoke. The greatest sum ever consumed by fire in this country was $1,000,000. That amount was burned at the sub-treasury, but the government was able to replace it at the cost of paper and printing. It has been estimated that 1 per cent. of all paper money issued is lost or destroyed. Of the old fractional currency, it is reckoned that eight million dollars' worth has been totally lost.

FASHIONS FOR MEN.

What to Wear in Collars, Cravats, Shirts, Gloves, Handkerchiefs, Jewelry, Etc.

The linen collar of evening dress continues the straight-up effect, the points at the greatest eminence, where they almost meet, and rising gradually from the back, says the New York Clothier and Furnisher.

The cravat of evening dress is of white lawn, one inch wide, without stitching or embroidery, or any advention of a like character that may be avolded.

The full-dress shirt has a wide, plain bosom, with which are worn three white pearl studs, or it is buttoned over three small sewed-on, old-fashioned, small pearl buttons—the latter more distingue.

The gloves of full dress are of delicate pearl, undressed, and with white or self narrow cording upon the backs.

The handkerchief of full dress is of fine white linen, with narrow hem-stitch border.

The muffler of full dress is of some solid, deep color, and is in the form of an enlarged handkerchief, to be folded to a width from four to five inches, placed about the neck under the swallow-tail collar, and folded across the waistcoat opening.

The boutonniere of full dress is of white flowers always—pink, chrysanthemum, orchids, hyacinth, gardenias, or whatever may be the prevalent flowers—but always white.

There is a widening of the range of walking gloves, and the difference in weight suggests that the fashionable man should have two pair in his repertory. For the morning call or afternoon tea there is a lighter weight in lighter shades of tan, that should be, moreover, snug-fitting; and for the "constitutional" morning and afternoon stroll and general wear, heavy, loose-fitting "makes," in both light and dark tan shades. The heavy undressed kids, in gray and snuff-color, are perhaps the desirable walking gloves. The back decoration is light, being a narrow raised cording.

The makers of jewelry in bulk for men follow the fashions of the specialists so closely that there is really no excuse for a man of ordinary means being without a scarf-pin. The premiership of the self-tied neckwear, moreover, and the many proselytes to its standard, has largely increased the demand for scarf-pins, and stimulated the makers to the issuing of some novel designs, and of a quality and cost that will absolve purchaser from the stigma of shoddiness.

The price gotten by the men's furnishers for the best grades of jewelry they carry is almost what the regular jewelers would ask for a similar article, really no better for all purposes and intents.

JUDGE FIELD'S INNOVATION.

A Kansas City judge has set a precedent which will be hailed with glee by litigants and particularly by witnesses. When one of the lawyers in a divorce case began to browbeat and bully a witness the judge interposed with this quiet remark:

"Gentlemen, if anyone is unjustly insulted in this court room I will not fine him for resenting it. This court will not further protect a man who gives an insult."

A very Daniel come to judgment is that judge. In his court the favorite practice of bolstering up a bad case by bullying the witnesses for the other side is likely to become unpopular.—Chicago Times.

"Don't you know," was the reply, "that it is very painful to be always lending money?"

"No, I didn't know that," replied the journalist, "I never did any thing of the kind in my life, but if you will let me have twenty dollars, I'll lend some feller a nickel just to see if what you say is so."

BEWARE OF BAD THIMBLES.

In a recent case of blood-poisoning, the sufferer was a seamstress, and the mischief resulted from her using a dirty metal thimble marked with verd gris, a little of which appears to have entered a scratch on the thimble finger.

There is really no excuse for women who trust their fingers to these cheap and worse than useless articles. Steel thimbles are much safer and cost very little.

LADIES "WITHOUT AN OBJECT."

Ladies often give as a reason why they do not take exercise: "Oh, I don't like to go out without an object." They seem to be unaware of the fact that to a well-organized frame motion and fresh air are positive daily necessities, irrespective of any "object," save the cool play of the wind on the temples and the healthful glow which follows a brisk walk. Medicine is a joke to it. No doctor, be his diploma ever so pretentious, could effect with simple means a more magical result. When it is considered what a beautifier exercise in the open air is, we marvel that the female portion of the community are so prone to neglect it. A little chilliness in the air, a little sprinkling of rain, a high wind, an inability to display a fine dress—what inadequate reasons for staying in the house and growing sallow, irritable and sick!

CATCHING SUCKERS.

How the Boys Played it on the Sympathetic Man.

With my own four eyes I saw it as plain as day.

The boy picked up a stone as big as his fist and dashed it into the eye of his companion, who stood not three feet away—straight into the eye, then it dropped with a sickening thud upon the pavement. The little fellow screamed with anguish, clapping his hand over his wounded eye, which I felt had certainly been put out by that cowardly act.

I seized the little ruffian by the collar and shook him furiously, I promise you, for the act was so dastardly that it made my blood boil and I felt like throttling him. Nothing this side of a dime novel Indian is so cruel as a boy.

To my astonishment I heard a peal of merry laughter. It came from the victim of the one whom I was clutching. I dropped him pretty quick, I tell you, for I know a thing or two about boys.

As the pair walked grinning away together I heard one say: "Dat was a good un! We caught dat sucker easy. Now git anudder pebble and we'll try it again furder down."

I watched the pair of mischief-makers from a distance, and saw them catch a fine mess of suckers as they had caught this one.

The trick is an easy one. Each boy has a pebble in his hand. Boy No. 1 makes believe he throws his stone. Boy No. 2 claps his hand to his eye with a howl of pain and lets his pebble drop. The illusion is perfect. The sucker does the rest. —New York Herald.

THE SONS OF VETERANS.

By Whom and When the Order Was Organized.

The order of the Sons of Veterans was organized in 1881 by Maj. A. P. Davis, or "Father Davis," as the boys love to call him. Maj. Davis is a resident of Pittsburg, Pa. He is a man in whom the military spirit has ever burned brightly. He was born in Gardiner, Me., in 1835. In 1849 he sailed to California in search of the gold which was the magnet of so many lives.

When the Crimean war broke out he enlisted as a subordinate officer in the French naval service, in which he remained to the close of the war. When the war of the rebellion broke out he enlisted in one of the first regiments raised in the state of Maine. He rose from the ranks until, in 1865, he was given the rank of major
